Gaffner wins battles, Costello wins war

Candidates discuss what happened

By Jack C. Ventimiglia and Rick Arnold
Staff writers

COLLINSVILLE — Bob Gaffner won some battles, but Jerry Costello won the war in the 21st Congressional District race Tuesday.

East St. Louis provided the margin of victory for Costello and the Democratic Party, delivering 4,724 votes for Costello to 608 for Gaffner.

R-Greenville, Districtwide, 1,673 votes out of 64,527 cast separated the candidates.

Costello took East St. Louis, and Madison and Montgomery counties. Excluding East St. Louis, Gaffner won in Costello's home precinct, in St. Clair County where Costello is County Board chairman, and in Clinton and Bond counties.

The rivals, who will compete for the same seat Nov. 8, opened that campaign by disputing the meaning of Tuesday's results. Each said the low turnout shows he will do better in November.

Costello, who had projected a landslide victory prior to Tuesday, said, "We were disappointed in the turnout, there's no question about that ... We had a lot of Democrats who told me, 'Jerry, you'll have no problem.' Many of those people stayed home today. ... We didn't turn out voters on the Republicans were out in full force."

While recording early returns, Gaffner, who had projected a close race, bucked conventional wisdom that Republicans do best in light elections.

"We felt the low turnout would be to our jeopardy. Because of (Costello's) organization, he controlled a low turnout. There's no doubt the Democratic organization is a much stronger organization in this district," he said.

Gaffner said losing by less than 4 percent gives him hope for a November victory, though he agreed Costello has the advantage for having won Tuesday.

Economic, military, international and social service concerns were expressed in the race by each candidate, but Gaffner said the focus was on ethics and campaign spending.

Gaffner estimated he spent about $275,000 to some $800,000 by Costello. Prior to vote totals being announced, Gaffner predicted the spending gap would make a difference.

"I'd like to say if we win tonight that the election can't be bought. But obviously (Costello's) spending is considerable. He's outbought us, from a media standpoint, considerably," Gaffner said.

Gaffner said more ethics-oriented campaigning can be expected. Allegations meant to connect Costello to questionable contribution sources and having influence on 20th Judicial Circuit judge selections are important because they indicate Costello's level of credibility, Gaffner said.

Costello said Republican National Committee officials in Washington "do their dirty tricks but we told them that won't work in our congressional district."

"In the last 30 days, this has been the dirtiest campaign in the history of our district and possibly in the history of our country."

"We're going to take the Republican National Committee and the Republican Party head on in November. They're going to sling mud and we're going to sling truth."

Gaffner said Costello's campaign strategy was not clean. The strategy involved checking Gaffner's aldermanic record in Greenville and job performance as an administrator for the St. Louis Community College District, Gaffner said. In part, the research informed Costello and the public that Gaffner missed 25 percent of his aldermanic council meetings.

Gaffner maintained the ethics issues raised by his campaign relate to Costello's record and will continue to be raised.

"Tonight's election won't make them go away. I mean, they're there," Gaffner said.

Madison plans street sweep up

MADISON — Police soon will place red tickets on cars parked on the street to advise residents when the Street Department will be sweeping there.

Starting Monday, the Street Department will keep to a new schedule of street sweeping. The tickets are an effort to get residents to move their cars on the date and time listed on the ticket.

Department employees will go door-to-door handing out leaflets about the program, and aldermen will also be spreading the word.

"It's going to be a little hard at first," Mayor John Bellico said. "It will take a joint effort." Bellico said residents will have a chance to get used to the new schedule and the red tickets.

Afterwards, parking tickets will be placed on cars that obstruct the sweeper's path.

The schedule will be followed in all months except December, January and February, when bad weather may be expected to interfere.

The schedule notice states: "Your side of the street will be swept once a month. To help you keep track, either save this schedule or mark the appropriate date on your calendar." (See SWEEP, Page 12A)

Lower groundwater, flood control called vital Nov. 8 election issues

The Tri-Cities Area Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors and Economic Development Committee have indicated their intention to be a catalyst and organizing force in passing a referendum that will increase revenues to the Metro East Sanitary District.

"Earlier, both groups identified eight key issues they said could seriously affect further development of the Quad City area."

"First and foremost was the potential threat of flooding such as experienced in October 1986 in East St. Louis as well as the rapidly increasing quantity and velocity of surface water runoff from upland areas," a spokesman said.

"Added to this, the higher groundwater levels throughout the river bottoms have caused severe damage to sewer systems and have also caused the foundations of many structures to collapse.

"In order to protect present property values and to attract new investment to the area, the water problems must be addressed in a realistic manner."

The chamber noted that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has stated that the proper solutions to the flood danger are to replace the older and badly deteriorated flood gates, revamping and improve the drainage ditches, and completely overhaul all of the pumping stations.

"They propose to provide engineering and the dollars needed to pay for the project at the rate of $3 for $1 of local matching funds," the spokesman related.

"In order to lower the groundwater to a more acceptable level, the Corps proposed to install a system of deep-wells and pumps and provide all the dollars needed for construction."

"The property needed for siting the wells and pumps is already owned by the district and would be accepted as an in-kind contribution."

"In other words, the system would be provided at no additional cost to the district. The only thing is, they estimate the cost of operating the systems and allowing for future maintenance would require a revenue stream of $400,000 annually."

"This future cost would have (See DITCHES, Page 12A)

Funds from Old Newsboys should be requested now

Children's agencies that wish to be considered for funding from the 1988 Old Newsboys Day drive should contact the Suburban Journals to obtain an application.

In the fall of 1987, a record $241,756.57 was raised through sales of the special Old Newsboys edition of the Suburban Journals. All funds raised went to children's agencies in the Illinois-Missouri metropolitan area.

The deadline for seeking an application this year is Aug. 26.

Old Newsboys Fund Application, Suburban Journals, 1714 Deer Tracks Trail, St. Louis, Mo. 63131.

Old Newsboys Day was begun in 1957 by the now-defunct St. Louis Globe-Democrat. The Suburban Journals have sponsored Old Newsboys Day since 1986. The campaign has raised more than $3.9 million for area children's charities.

Worrell, Journals team up to 'save' leukemia victims

Just 20 years ago, a leukemia diagnosis was almost always the same thing as a death sentence.

Today, 50 to 70 percent of children diagnosed with leukemia, and more than 40 percent of diagnosed adults, eventually will live healthy, normal lives.

Playing a vital part in saving so many lives have been the Leukemia Society of America, Inc. and its local arm, the Gateway Chapter, serving eastern Missouri, the Illinois counties of Monroe, Madison and St. Clair, as well as the entire state of Arkansas.

Now, the Cardinals' Todd Worrell is pitching in. By guessing how many saves the reliever will record in the 1988 baseball season, Suburban Journals readers can become eligible for a grand prize selection for a weekend trip to New York to see a 1989 Cardinals-Mets game courtesy of USAir.

The trip will include a pre-game autograph session with Worrell and Mets catcher Gary Carter, national sports chairman of the Leukemia Society.

The name of the winner of the Todd Worrell Saves Contest will be chosen in St. Louis on Oct. 2 following the conclusion of the last Cardinals game of the season. The winner will be announced on Channel 11 following the game, which is in New York.

In addition, by sending in tax-deductible contributions with their entries, Journal readers can receive special gifts, including an autographed poster of Worrell and an autographed baseball, and become eligible for special prizes, which will be announced Aug. 20 during the Cardinals-Reds game at Busch Stadium.

A contribution to the Leukemia Society is not required to be eligible for the grand prize trip. Entries should be postmarked no later than Aug. 13 and sent to: Leukemia Society of America, 10425 Old Olive Street Road, Suite 101, St. Louis, Mo. 63141.

Donors giving $25 or more will get both the poster and baseball and become eligible to win one pair of box seats to the Cardinals weekend home games during the 1989 season. Donors giving at least $100 will get both the poster and baseball and become eligible to win one of five pairs of tickets to the Cardinals game during the '89 season.

Those giving $50 to $99 will receive the poster and become eligible to win one of five pairs of tickets to a remaining Cardinals '88 home game, plus a $30 gift certificate to the Hall of Fame gift shop.

Donors giving $25 to $49 will receive the poster and become eligible to win one of five Cardinals '87 championship plaques.

Entry forms for the contest will appear in the Journal this week and next week.

The Todd Worrell Saves Contest is part of a national campaign to draw attention to leukemia and the efforts to fight the disease. On Sunday (Aug. 7), a "Six Hours for Life" telecast from Paramount Studios in Los Angeles will benefit the Leukemia Society of America. The show will air locally from 8:30 p.m. on KPLR-TV (Channel 11). Local hosts will be KPLR newscasters Holly Phillips and Don Clark.

Worrell became interested in the Leukemia Society through his wife, Jamie, who last year, along with Mollie Forsch, wife of Redbirds pitcher Bob Forsch, was chairman of the Cardinals' Calendar project sponsored by the Gateway Chapter. Each month of the Cardinals Calendar features family photos of a different Redbirds player.

Todd Worrell

"Todd said he'd like to be involved," said Karen Harriman, executive director of the Gateway Chapter. "In other ballparks they have home run contests for a variety of charities. Todd said maybe we could use his talents and guess saves instead of home runs."

Money raised through the contest will go to support patient care, research, community service, and public and professional education.

Date set (maybe) for Partney trial

EDWARDSVILLE — Granite City police sergeants Jim Reader and Dave Rosenberg and Alderman Dan Partney, a former fire and police commissioner, may go on trial at 9 a.m. Aug. 22 for alleged cheating on a 1985 promotion exam.

Then again, they may not. Circuit Judge James K. Donovan, Belleville, set the date Friday at a hearing in the Madison County Circuit Court, but said he realized there are a lot of factors that could change it.

Partney is accused of illegally helping Reader and Rosenberg obtain the highest scores in the nation on a standardized test used to determine promotion eligibility. Both were promoted to sergeant based, in part, on those scores.

A grand jury indicted the three in January for official misconduct for the alleged incident, but Madison County State's Attorney Dick Allen, in separate hearings, dropped the charges because of "technical flaws."

Allen, at that time, indicated he would take the cases back to the grand jury or, he said later, would seek information based on the grand jury evidence.

In July, at Allen's request, Clyde L. Kuehn, former St. Clair County state's attorney, was appointed as special prosecutor in the case by Chief 3rd Circuit Judge P.J. O'Neill. Kuehn issued information the day after his appointment.

Madison School Board shuffles administrators

MADISON — The retirement of Middle School Assistant Principal Richard Spillers and the resignation of Principal Kenneth Perkins have resulted in several administrative changes in District 12.

Spillers had been appointed as assistant principal in July after serving as assistant superintendent for three years. He was assistant principal of the Middle School in 1984, and prior to that a teacher at Dunbar and Louis Baer schools, and principal at Blair School.

His retirement was accepted by the Board of Education on Thursday.

Perkins resigned to accept a similar position in Fairview Heights.

The board later assigned Thesis Franks as Middle School principal and Roger Benway as his assistant.

Benway had been principal at the Louis Baer School, which is now closed, and Franks had been assistant principal at the high school.

Replacing Franks as assistant principal at the high school will be Lavina Long, who had been a physical education teacher in the district for 20 years.

Last month, the board promoted Robert Mehele, who had been assistant high school principal, to principal, and reassigned Arthur Carter, who had been principal, to administrative assistant in the central office.

Robertson said Tuesday that she was the 7-Eleven store at N. Lindbergh Avenue and 10th Street about 11 p.m. Saturday when she was attacked by a Hispanic man who carried a home-made nightstick.

The man, she said, grabbed her hands and told her, "Hey, you, Tammy. Yeah, you, church girl. You're not going to start this AIDS s--- again, are you? I'm going to make sure you're not."

"He said, 'Got that?' and he hit me on the head (with the stick) and I screamed and he ran off."

Robertson's son, Jason Robertson, 7, was not notified of the incident until Tuesday because Robertson said she was "afraid."

Woman and old cat make happy couple

By Andy Sterling
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — "You guys took a picture of my neighbor's pig," said the caller. "I think you should take a picture of my cat. She's been around a long time."

The caller, Cathy Fox, has a cat named Satan, who she says is 20. Fox, who resides in the 2800 block of Roosevelt Avenue, has a delightful effervescent giggle that bubbles through her conversation like the call of an especially vocal bobwhite (tee-HEE).

A veterinarian said a 20-year-old cat is equivalent to a human in his 90s. But it was Fox's laughter, more than the cat's age, that intrigued this reporter and made him want to meet her. She looked just as cheerful as she sounded, with laugh lines etched deep into her tanned face.

"She's just a black cat," Fox said of Satan. "She doesn't look awful high-class, but she's still going, tee-HEE." Satan looked bored and yawned, showing off her lone tooth.

On Tuesday, Fox celebrated her own 62nd birthday and asked guests to bring Satan a little tidbit too, like tuna. "She's the cattingest cat I've ever seen," Fox said.

Fox's husband, Fred, had brought Satan home from Granite City Steel where Fred was a crane operator and Satan was a two-month-old stray. That was on the couple's 14th wedding anniversary. Fred died last August, and now Satan and Fox's four other cats and two dogs keep their mistress company.

"He just loved this old cat to pieces," Fox said of her late husband.

Neighbors drop by constantly to chat and sit in lawn chairs in front of the one-story stone house with the painting of a fox over the door. One neighbor,

Yvonne Whitford, said of Fox, "Any stray that comes by, she takes and starts feeding them, and they just move in."

"My mother was like that," said Fox, who grew up on a farm in Missouri. "She fed hobos all the time, too."

Fox stroked Satan and talked about when she first laid eyes on her. "She was so mean," Fox said. "That's why we named her Satan. We kept track of her age and she just kept living and living." Any litters?

"She had two within a year and we put a stop to that, tee-HEE. We thought she was a boy cat until she had the kittens. We figured it out one time that if she had been allowed to keep having kittens, she would have had more than 80."

The guests Tuesday sang "Happy Birthday" to Fox and cat. Fox thinks Satan may have a few more birthday celebrations left in her.

"She's going pretty strong yet, though she's kinda wobbly-legged in the back. She's only got one tooth, the poor old thing. I'm not going to put her to sleep till I just have to, not as long as she can eat and get around."

Fox said Satan seems to want to eat every 20 minutes, even though she's a trim cat. Fox cuts up chicken livers and raw hamburger for her.

"Oh, she just loves them. I think that's what's kept her alive so long, eating liver. My husband used to buy her hog and calf livers," she said, laughing that lovely infectious laugh.

Fox may add another sort of critter to her menagerie. She joked about going "husband hunting."

"This (street) is Widow Alley," she said. "The young fellows just hustle through here, tee-HEE!"

They say that happy people live longer. If that's true, Cathy Fox is going to need a couple more long-lived cats like Satan to keep her company in the coming years.

USCG Academy accepting applications

The United States Coast Guard Academy has announced that it is now accepting and processing applications for appointment as cadet, U.S. Coast Guard, Class of 1993.

Applications are being accepted from both men and women. Appointments as Coast Guard cadets are tendered solely on the basis of an annual nationwide competition, with no congressional appointments or geographical quotas.

Applications for appointment must be submitted to: Director of Admissions, U.S. Coast Guard Academy, New London, Conn. 06320, prior to Dec. 15, 1988.

Candidates must arrange to participate in either the College Board Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) or American College Testing Assessment (ACT) prior to or including the Dec. 10, 1988, administration for the ACT, and the Dec. 3, 1988, administration for the SAT.

The competition for appointment as cadet is based on the candidate's high-school rank, performance on either the SAT or ACT, and leadership potential as demonstrated by participation in high school extracurricular activities, community affairs and/or part-time employment.

Most of the successful candidates rank in the top quarter of their high school class and demonstrate proficiency in both the mathematical and applied science fields.

To qualify for the competition, an applicant must be unmarried at the time of appointment, have no legal obligations resulting from a prior marriage.

Elks Teens of Month announced

The Teen-ager of the Month awards were presented to Alisa D. Nelson and Grant A. Abernethy by Elks Committee Chairman, Steve Isenbarg at a recent lodge meeting.

The Teen-ager of the Month program is sponsored by Granite City Elks Lodge 1083 in an effort to bring recognition to outstanding teen-agers in the area.

Nelson, 17, is the daughter of William and Karen Nelson, 5 Nightingale Court. She is a recent graduate of Granite City High School.

Alisa has been active in National Honor Society, the Phtography Club, Science Club, Foreign Policy Club and Church Youth Choir. She was a camp counselor for handicapped children, an assistant Sunday school teacher and a math tutor.

Abernethy, 17, is the son of Ron and Norma Abernethy of 3225 Erin Drive. He recently graduated from Granite City High School.

He has been active in the Student Council, Science Club, Empathy, wrestling and St. John's Youth Group. His hobbies are baseball cards and wrestling.

Thompson OKs automatic payment of child support

SPRINGFIELD — Legislation requiring virtually automatic withholding of child support from paychecks starting Jan. 1 was signed into law by Gov. James Thompson.

"Most judges have been advocating that for a long time," said Madison County Family Court Judge George Filcoff.

Filcoff said the automatic withholding law will benefit the parent caring for the child by guaranteeing regular payments early and will aid in "record-keeping for the parent that pays."

The judge said the new law also will reduce the administrative paperwork now required for wage deduction orders for child support payments.

"In 95 percent of the cases that come through here now, we have wage deductions signed. Generally, the parties want to do this anyway."

In the past, however, orders to withhold child support from paychecks usually have been made only after the financially responsible parents had been sent a notice of delinquency for missing a payment and then had another 30-day stay period, said James Vrabec. He is supervisor of child support in the Madison County Circuit Clerk's office.

As of a month ago, 774 orders for child support withholding were in effect in Madison County.

He said his office has aged about 100 new child support cases a month.

Filcoff said he hears about 200 cases involving delinquent child support payments every Friday, and it is a continuing problem.

Under the new law, deductions from paychecks of the responsible parent will take effect as soon as a divorce has become final or, in the case of parents who are not married, when paternity has been established, he said.

Vrabec said he thought employers, who will have to deduct the child support and forward it to the circuit clerk's office, may find the new law "cumbersome, and it could possibly increase their workload."

Dan Pittmann, a spokesman for the nois Department of Public Aid, said it would be no more difficult for employers than coding in the deductions they already make for taxes and other items.

A companion bill signed by the governor will allow employers to deduct another $5 a month from an employee's paycheck for administrative costs in handling the child support payments. Previously, they were allowed to charge $4 a month.

The department had pushed for the automatic withholding.

Fulbright program deadline Oct. 10

An Oct. 10 deadline has been set to submit applications for graduate study abroad under a Fulbright Program grant through Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, according to SIUE Graduate School Dean Rosemarie Archangel.

Most of the grants offered in the competition — made possible by the Fulbright Program, foreign governments and private donors — provide round-trip transportation, tuition and maintenance for an academic year; a few provide international travel only, or a stipend intended as a partial grant-in-aid.

Applicants must be U.S. citizens and must have a bachelor's degree or its equivalent before the beginning date of the grant and, in most cases, should be proficient in the language of the country to which the applicant has applied.

Except under specific awards, a candidate may not have a doctorate.

Creative and performing artists are not required to have a bachelor's degree, but must have four years professional study or equivalent experience. Candidates in medicine must have a medical degree or equivalent.

Application forms and further information for students currently enrolled at SIUE may be obtained from Dean Archangel, program adviser, in Rensselaer Building 2215.

Library 'latchkey' workshop offered

The University of Illinois is offering a Metro East workshop, "Latchkey Kids in the Library," Sept. 16.

It is designed to assist library personnel in managing the problems resulting from parents dropping-off and leaving their children unattended at the library for extended times.

The workshop is for librarians, especially those who work with young people, library administrators, board members, and library consultants.

Participants will explore ways of coping with latchkey kids; learn about programs especially designed for children left unattended at the library; discuss the rights of the children, the responsibilities of the parents, and the legal responsibilities of librarians; and develop techniques for managing the latchkey youngsters when they are at the library.

Other topics will include trends in the family structure, the scope of the latchkey kid problem, psychology of children coping on their own, the problem from the child's perspective, and the legal, social and ethical responses to latchkey kids in the library.

Dr. Leslie Edmonds, associate dean and assistant professor in the Graduate School of Library and Information Science at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, will conduct the workshop. She has worked in a variety of library settings, including a multicultural, multi-lingual Headstart resource center in the Chicago Public Library.

The workshop will be from 9 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. Friday, Sept. 16, at the Ramada Inn in Fairview Heights. The cost is $45, which includes lunch.

Early registration is encouraged. For further information, persons may contact Bill Sutton, Office of Statewide Programming, 10606 Lincoln Trail, Fairview Heights 62208 or call 398-7989.

This library workshop is sponsored by the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign Graduate School of Library and Information Science, Office of Statewide Programming, and Public Service Division of Extramural Courses in cooperation with the Kaskaskia and the Lewis and Clark library systems.

Granite City schools get grant

Harry A. Briggs Jr., regional superintendent of schools, announced that several school districts in Madison County have received federal grants totaling $223,473 to remove architectural barriers for the handicapped in their school buildings.

Although the $223,473 represents only 27 percent of the funds originally requested, the allocation will allow some districts to renovate their buildings to better accommodate handicapped students.

Ted Sanders, state superintendent of schools, said the State Board of Education received a total federal grant award of $2,286,227, which was then allocated to local schools on the basis of "Priority I" requests and the number of handicapped students that would benefit from barrier removal.

Priority I requests include installation of hand rails, ramps, elevators and special drinking fountains, as well as restroom modifications.

In Madison County, the Granite City, Alton, Highland, Edwardsville and Wood River school systems and East Alton/Wood River High School District received allocations.

With the exception of the Alton district, which received 100 percent of its request, the other districts received percentages of their requests.

Briggs said those districts will need to further prioritize their needs, based on the allocations.

Bike safety may ride on many factors

By Janet R. Burnett
Madison County
Extension adviser

Summertime brings back that great American pastime — bicycling. The exhilarating feeling of the wind blowing through your hair as you whiz down the hill — your smile still at the top — is hard to match.

Even if the bike is your child's most prized possession, he or she needs to learn from "training-wheel days" that a bike is not a toy. It is a vehicle.

Statistics show that more than 350,000 children end up in hospital emergency rooms each year as a result of bicycle-related injuries.

Most bicycling accidents could be avoided — if riders took the time to learn the rules of the road and follow a few simple precautions.

Young children should ride their bikes in the park, on sidewalks or in driveways. Even streets with little traffic pose risks. Parents should think carefully before allowing children to ride in the street, even when the parent is supervising. Accidents happen in the blink of an eye.

Older children who ride to one another's homes or the park should be taught to follow the basic rules of the road.

Ride on the right side of the road, with the flow of traffic. Obey all stop signs and red lights. Walk the bicycle through busy intersections. When making a left turn, look back and yield to traffic coming from behind. Never assume that drivers can see you, even if you can see them.

Give the bicycle a "tune-up." Check brakes, pedals, handlebars, reflectors, and tighten the frame's nuts and bolts. Inflate the tires to the proper pressure. And replace any parts that are missing, broken or worn out.

Size is one of the most important considerations in choosing a new bike, or deciding if last year's bike will see you through another summer.

A boy should be able to straddle the bike with the inch of clearance above the top bar when feet are flat on the ground. A girl on a girl's bike should be able to sit comfortably on the seat with one leg straight and her foot on the ground.

With a few simple precautions, bicycling can continue as the great American pastime for another summer.

Kids need heart attack protection, too

By Jane Cosby

As every parent knows, "monkey see, monkey do" applies without reservation to young children. That is why the problem of heart-attack prevention affects children as well as adults.

The same unhealthy habits that may be putting you at risk for a heart attack are being developed by your children. Your bad example could be harming the future health of your children.

If you would like to change your errant ways on the path to healthfulness, there is a prescription just for you. Joseph C. Piscatella's written "Choices for a Healthy Heart" (Workman Publishing, $14.95), a book that promises on the cover to tell you "everything you and your family need to know to take control of your cardiac health, change your behavior patterns, lose weight and lower cholesterol, once and for all."

Let me reassure you that the author does keep his promise. The book very carefully details each risk factor related to heart attacks and specific ways to adopt healthy alternatives to the factors. The second half of the publication is a cookbook of "heart-healthy" recipes.

Piscatella lists the cardiac risk factors as high blood pressure, elevated cholesterol, cigarette smoking, being overweight, lack of exercise and chronic stress.

Changing your diet attacks several of the risk factors at once. Piscatella gives a five-point plan for going about the mammoth task.

The first is to reduce fat in your family's diet. A simple way to do this is to reduce the amount of red meat you eat and eat more poultry (skinless) and fish. Switch to low-fat dairy products and reduce the amount of fat and oil you use to prepare food. (Caution: Do not put a child younger than 2 years old on a low-fat diet or on low-fat dairy products. They need much more dietary fat than do adults or older children.)

Next, you want to reduce the amount of sugar in your diet. Eliminate soft drinks, keep alcohol intake minimal and substitute fresh, in-season fruit for high-calorie desserts.

Third, teach your complex carbohydrates in your diet: vegetables, legumes, fruit and whole-grain bread.

Next, reduce salt by getting rid of your salt shaker and lastly, increase your water intake to two quarts a day.

If you are skeptical about getting your children to go along with these dietary changes, consider the suggestions of the author's wife, Bernie, who supplied the 200 recipes listed in the book.

She acknowledges that children will not request healthy food in place of junk food. If given the choice, junk food will win out every time. So her solution is to keep popcorn, non-fat yogurt or fruit and juice frozen bars on hand for healthy snacking.

She said that if she has a plate of sliced apples or pears, or heaping bowls of grapes, strawberries or raspberries, or a tray of vegetables with salsa or hummus, her children will start munching on them without thinking about it.

Homemade muffins and breads are her alternatives to sugary cookies, cakes, cupcakes or chips. Homemade apple butter and strawberry preserves substitute for jelly or other sweets.

In addition to watching your family's diet, get your child started in the habit of regular aerobic exercise. The author suggests the following exercises for developing cardiovascular health: brisk walking, indoor cycling, skipping rope, floor rowing, jogging, running in place, swimming and cross-country skiing.

Grants aid sickle cell researchers

The battle against sickle cell anemia, an often fatal disease that affects one in 500 black newborns, is one step closer to victory.

The March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation has announced that Timothy J. Ley, M.D., and Kiran K. Chada, Ph.D., will receive grants from the March of Dimes Memorial Endowment Fund for their research into sickle cell anemia.

Both researchers are conducting separate studies into gene therapy to combat the genetic disorder, which occurs mainly in the black population.

The Colonel Sanders Memorial Endowment, funded by Kentucky Fried Chicken, underwrites the research through a March of Dimes program aimed at helping young, promising researchers.

"Dr. Chada and Dr. Ley are involved in state-of-the-art research into one of the most promising approaches to date for treatment of sickle cell anemia," said Richard P. Leavitt, director of science information at the March of Dimes.

"What makes their research so exciting is that it may help us understand how to turn on existing, but dormant, normal genes to treat sickle cell patients."

In persons with sickle cell disease, a variant gene produces abnormal adult hemoglobin, the main oxygen-carrying protein in red blood cells; this causes red blood cells to deform. However, all normal humans produce another type of hemoglobin, called fetal hemoglobin, before birth.

Both Drs. Chada and Ley are studying how the body normally turns off the gene producing fetal hemoglobin and turns on the gene producing adult hemoglobin.

According to the March of Dimes' Leavitt, "Once this is understood, we may discover a way to reverse the process and turn on the fetal gene, to produce normal fetal hemoglobin that would substitute for that produced by the variant adult gene causing sickle cell anemia."

"If we can understand this mechanism, we may be able to make it work for us in turning around sickle cell disease," Leavitt said. "It may turn out to be a simpler and safer therapy than using gene transplants."

Ley, an assistant professor in the Department of Medicine at Washington University Medical Center, St. Louis, will receive a $30,000 grant. Chada, an assistant professor in the Department of Biochemistry at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, Piscataway, N.J., will also receive a $30,000 grant.

In March 1988, Kentucky Fried Chicken restaurants across the country joined together for their ninth annual March of Dimes campaign. Half of the proceeds from the month-long fund-raiser go into the Colonel Sanders Memorial Endowment Fund, which was established by the March of Dimes in 1987.

Tanksley graduates as doctor of medicine

Michael W. Tanksley, formerly of Granite City, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth L. Tanksley, Canfield, Ohio, has received a doctor of medicine degree from Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio.

Dr. Tanksley graduated from the University of Notre Dame in 1984 with a bachelor of science degree, majoring in pre-professional studies.

He began his residency in diagnostic-radiology in July at St. Elizabeth Hospital Medical Center in Youngstown, Ohio.

Dr. Tanksley is the grandson of Mrs. Fern Hacke of Granite City, the late Milford Hahn and the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tanksley Sr.

Soap star awash with fame

Terrell follows 'Guiding Light' to find success

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — He has the physique of a gymnast, 6 feet, 170 pounds, Paul Newman-esque blue eyes and the Superman jawline of Christopher Reeve. We're talking hunk city here, the kind of looks you can take to the bank with the right show biz breaks.

He is Greg Terrell, 29, a.k.a. Rusty Shayne, the role he plays on CBS' "Guiding Light." His looks make some women's hearts beat fast and some men's blood pressures rise.

Even his stage name is vaguely glamorous: Terrell Anthony.

For those of us with normal looks, it would be easy to snipe, to dismiss Terrell, a 1975 graduate of Granite City High School South, as just another pretty face. But the actor's soft-spoken, thoughtful answers to questions during a recent interview suggested an intelligence and sensitivity not often suspected in people so cosmetically blessed.

Take, for example, his opinions of two professions he followed before landing on daytime TV.

Terrell was a model for about five years, and he didn't like the "vagabond lifestyle" and being treated as "just another object" by photographers. "It was a very boring business," he said.

He was also a TV newsman for CBS, which loaned him out to network affiliates. He was disdainful of the shallowness of TV news coverage.

"I'm too cause-oriented," he said. "I wanted to be involved in what I was reporting."

He also gladdened one ink-stained heart by saying he didn't like how TV newscasters rely on the print media for much of their information, yet never admit to it. "It happens all the time, both locally and nationally," he said.

Despite his looks, Terrell is not a very likely soap star. Venial and mortal sins are staples of daytime TV. Yet Terrell describes himself as a born-again Christian — with reservations.

"Christ is the most important thing in my life, but I'm not necessarily a Puritan or a Fundamentalist Christian."

Rusty Shayne, Terrell's character on "Guiding Light," is an incorruptible undercover cop in a corrupt town called Springfield, USA. But the real Terrell said he would not hesitate to play a bad guy.

"It's interesting how actors routinely profess the desire to play villains. Something there is about villainy that fascinates us, as if we all secretly wish we had the gunpoint to behave anti-socially."

Terrell's sense of morality showed through as he explained: "I wouldn't have any problems with playing a rapist, for instance, as long as the rapist respected the rewards of being a rapist. I wouldn't want (an evil character) to become triumphant."

Terrell, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill H. Terrell of Granite City (he owns a local insurance agency), attended the University of Missouri-Columbia and received a bachelor's degree in journalism. He studied philosophy and theology at the University of California-Berkeley, Golden Gate Seminary and San Francisco State University.

In Chicago, he studied acting at the Goodman Theater and worked with the Free Street Theater. He has had roles in one TV movie and the NBC soap "Another World."

Terrell originally attended Mizou on a baseball scholarship, but he quit the team after only 10 days. "I had played baseball for so long," he said. "I decided I didn't want to be an athlete all my life. I wanted to live a normal college life."

He became involved with the Baptist Student Ministry at Mizou and later worked as a juvenile counselor in San Francisco, where he got his start in modeling.

Today, he is still interested in helping others. He makes personal appearances on behalf of Make-a-Wish, an organization that grants wishes to terminally ill children, and to raise money for AIDS research.

"I've lost numerous friends to AIDS," he said.

Terrell lives in Greenwich Village, where he shares a two-story townhouse condo with a former girlfriend, now married to another man who works in California.

"We're still very close," he said. "He is one of eight regulars on 'Guiding Light,' which translates into a pretty full work week of four to five 12-hour days. He also works out five days a week to keep his hunk-ish figure trim. It's part of the job, he said.

"To get ahead in this business, you should have a body that people would enjoy seeing when you take your shirt off."

Art reflects life, Terrell said, and nowhere more so than in daytime TV. People are more conscious of physical fitness today.

People are also more conscious of things like AIDS. Terrell thinks AIDS is the reason why the show's writers haven't had Shayne, his otherwise macho, brawling character on "Guiding Light," consummate his relationship with his girlfriend, Mindy Lewis, played by actress Krista Tesreau. As recently as two years ago, he said, Shayne and Lewis would have been portrayed as lovers.

"We (soaps) follow the trends of society and certainly the (sexual) mores of society have changed," he said.

For now, Terrell is content to reap the considerable monetary rewards of a soap star. He wouldn't say exactly how much he makes, but based on some sample figures he gave, it's safe to say that he makes at least $150,000 a year — perhaps two or three times that. He said a few longtime soapers make a million dollars a year.

As for the future, he said he hopes to be able to act in a variety of roles in TV and movies. With a break or two, he could become a megastar, but he is realistic about his future. You sense he wouldn't be devastated if he didn't make it big.

"There are critics who think highly of my work, but nevertheless that could be derailed by the wrong part or whatever."

On hold is his ambition to write plays — "Writing is my first love," he said he has written a couple of short plays which have never been performed.

Overall, you get a sense Terrell has his feet on solid ground. Even his pretty-boy stage name was chosen for practical reasons: there was already a Gregory Terrell on the books of the actors' unions which legislate names to avoid confusion.

"Given that I was called by my last name much of my life, it seemed natural to take my last name as my first name."

Lost In This Space

By Andy Siering

A long night's trip into TV mediocrity

I was taking a nap, so I missed the lights-on ceremonies from Wrigley Field on Monday on WGN.

When I woke up there was a movie in progress, so I decided to spend the rest of the evening watching a different sort of trash than the brand of baseball played on West Addison in Chicago.

The first piece of regurgitation was "Hollywood Wives," a TV movie with a plot so improbable in substance and timing that it made UFOlogists and Harry Caray seem sensible by comparison.

In the climactic scene, twin brothers, separated at birth and adopted, show up simultaneously at the mansion of their real mother — one to discuss a pretension to make him a movie star, and the other to kill her for giving him up.

Let's back up here. You see, the first one has learned he was adopted, but not who his real mother is. Meanwhile, he has met his real mother at a Hollywood soiree, where she, who doesn't realize who he is, decides to make him a really big star. Years earlier, she had made the kid's real father a star, but now she's ticked off at him and she invites him to the house under the pretext of planning a campaign to resurrect his career, but she really intends to show off her new star and snub him. Of course, none of them knows anything about their true relationships to each other, except for the evil twin, who figures it out near the end of the movie, thus removing the possibility of any dramatic tension building up.

You see what I mean? This movie is STUPID, STUPID, STUPID!!! But then you're watching it, aren't you, so what does that make you?

So anyway, there they are, the mother, the father, the good twin and the evil twin... Oh, I forgot to mention that the good twin's pregnant wife is there too, come back to make up with hubby, who she wishes didn't want to make millions in the movies instead of working at McDonald's or something.

All is revealed in the end, except for an explanation for why they even bothered to make this awful movie. Good is triumphant and the loose ends of the plot are neatly, if improbably, tied up when the good twin wrestles the gun away from the evil twin and shoots him right in the heart with a gun so big it would give Dirty Harry pistol envy. But the evil twin still lives long enough to hear his real mother explain everything, and also to utter the immortal words, "I never knew I had a brudder," before expiring.

This movie could make you think kindly of Charles Manson.

The second movie was a classic piece of trash called "She," starring Ursula Andress, the finest example of Swiss architecture since the Alps and the undisputed queen of the heaving bosoms school of acting.

Undress, uh, Andress plays Alisha, a 2,000-year-old Egyptian queen who has discovered the secret of eternal life — The Sacred Fire, an ordinary fire that once in a great while becomes illuminated by the light of the full moon, turns cold, and... well, that's enough technical detail.

The movie also stars Christopher Lee, who from the look of his costuming agreed to be in it solely so he could wear women's hats.

The male lead gets enchanted by a vision of "She" (or her, to be grammatical) and leads his friends on an expedition to the middle of nowhere looking for her.

"She" rules a forgotten kingdom, and she's a real dragon, who gets her jollies from tossing her subjects into a bottomless fiery pit, but he doesn't care how she acts because he is apparently on drugs: male hormones, probably.

"She" gets hers, though, when she leads him into the Sacred Fire to make him immortal (or tal) and it turns out that a second trip reverses the effects of the first trip. She turns to dust before his eyes, tra-la, and he, heartbroken, vows to wait as long as it takes for the fire to turn cold again so he can enter it to reverse the process. His buddy assures him it will someday.

But when, Holly, when? our hero asks plaintively, which was exactly what I had been thinking when I was waiting for this awful celluloid trip to end.

Like Cub fans have said for years, "I shoulda stood in bed."

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Naumann

Wickham-Brake

Angela Marie Wickham, daughter of Donald and Shirley Zeigler, Granite City, and Brian David Brake, son of Mary Brake, Granite City, and the late Lloyd Brake, have announced their engagement and forthcoming marriage.

Wickham is a graduate of Granite City High School and is employed by Krane, St. Louis, as a laborer.

Brake is a graduate of Granite City High School North and is employed by Dobbins Goodyear Service, Overland, as a mechanic.

The couple is planning a Sept. 27 wedding at Grace Baptist Church, Granite City.

Archbishop to close out Marian Year

St. Louis Archbishop John L. May will preside at the closing of the special Marian Year in ceremonies at 7 p.m. Sunday at the New Cathedral, 4140 Lindell, St. Louis.

Included in the evening event will be the Scriptural rosary, Benediction and consecration of the Archdiocese of St. Louis to God through the Virgin Mary under her title as the Immaculate Conception.

In 1846, the bishops of the United States designated the Immaculate Conception as this nation's national patroness. Most of the nation's Catholic bishops will be closing the Marian Year with this historic consecration—believed to be the first official consecration to the national patroness.

Also of historic impact is the Sacred Image of Guadalupe, which is of the Virgin Mary being honored under the title of the Immaculate Conception and Mother of the Americas.

The bishops consecration will be included in the Marian Year presentation to the Holy Mary Pope John Paul II.

May has invited all area residents to attend.

New Salem Baptist to honor Williamsses

The New Salem M.B. Church, Venice, plans to honor its pastor, the Rev. John H. Williams, and his wife, Emma, at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and 4 p.m. Sunday.

Williams has been the pastor at New Salem for six years.

Several area ministers and church members will take part in the ceremonies.

The public is invited.

Family travels south of border: from Granite City to Mexico City

Carmen Breckner and son, John, 333 English Place, and her brother Gilbert Carrizales, also of Granite City, flew to San Antonio, Texas, where they were met by another Breckner son, Capt. Harvey Breckner, stationed at Lackland Air Force.

After a visit with Harvey Breckner, his wife, Debbie, and their sons Mathew and Ryn, Mrs. Breckner and her relatives were met by another brother, Anthony Carrizales, who joined them for the remainder of the trip to Mexico City, Mexico, where they visited relatives.

Mrs. Breckner had not visited the homeland of her parents in 24 years, and her brothers had never visited Mexico.

They visited historic landmarks of Mexico, including the Pyramids at Teotihuacan, the cathedral of Mexico City, the Lady of Guadalupe Shrine, and the National Palace. The trip, completed in the 17th century, houses government offices.

They also visited relatives in Monterey, Calif., before returning to San Antonio, where they visited the Alamo, the San Antonio River Walk and got a view of the city from a restaur-rant atop the Tower of the Americas.

Mrs. Breckner and Gilbert Carrizales returned home last week, but John Breckner remained in San Antonio to visit with his brother and family.

Bill and Kati Baugh, 18 Moorland Drive, hosted Mrs. Baugh's brother Mack Kidd and his son Butch last week. The Kidds, Tampa, Fla., had made a trip to Sikeston, Mo., to visit Mrs. Baugh's father, Woodrow Kidd, who was in the Missouri Delta Hospital there. The Kidds made an extended trip to the Mitchell area to visit relatives.

The Mitchell Presbyterian Church, Greenway Drive and East Chain of Rocks Road, had various groups and soloists fill in for its regular church choir while the choir members were on summer hiatus.

Last month's performers included a trio consisting of Lucy Moore, Georgia Simpson and Charlotte Star, a saxophone solo by Eric LaVelle, a vocal solo by Betty Tormin and vocal duet by Sherry and Philip Simpson.

Shelly Downs, 618 Ashland Ave., was honored July 25 with a baby shower given by the women of Faith Chapel General Baptist Church.

Sixteen guests gathered in the Fellowship Hall of the church, 664 Ashland Ave. The guests were served cake, punch and coffee.

Out-of-town guests included the honoree's mother, Carol McNeely; mother-in-law, Elaine Roberson; and sister-in-law, Cindy, all of St. Peters, Mo.

The women of the Fairmont General Baptist Church in St. Peters, where Mrs. Downs and her husband attended church before moving to Mitchell, also honored the couple with a baby shower.

Mrs. Downs and her husband, Dwight, were married May 4, 1984, in the Fairmont Church in St. Peters. Her husband is a student teacher at Southern Illinois University working on a teaching degree. He is also training to be a wrestling coach.

Emma Redstone and her son Tim, 2419 Meadowlark Drive, have returned from Carlton, Ga., where they visited her brother Tony Turner and his wife, Debbie, and their children Richard and Amy. The Redstones and Turners enjoyed a trip to Stone Mountain and lots of swimming.

Mr. and Mrs. David (Daisy) Ferguson, 2519 Meadowlark Drive, are grandparents of a new grandson, born to their son Douglas Ferguson and his wife, Wendy, Moro, Ill.

The baby was born Aug. 7 at Walwood Hospital in Hospital. He weighed 8 pounds, 9 ounces, and has been named Jeremy David. He has a brother, Jarom, who is 18 months old.

The Silver Strings, a musical group sponsored by the Retired Seniors Volunteer Program, performed for residents of the Meadow View Care Center, Interstate 70 and Illinois 180, on Aug. 2. The group is scheduled to appear once a month.

Charlie Norris, 116 Lenox Ave., was the guest of honor at a picnic luncheon at Wilson Park on Aug. 7.

The luncheon, sponsored by his children and grandchildren, was held to mark Norris' 80th birthday. About 45 guests attended. Following lunch, the group enjoyed an afternoon of horse-rides.

Sheri Jones and her parents, Betty and Ruby Jones, 2824 Meadowlark Drive, have returned from Springfield, Ill., where she and her teammates of the Elks 73 soccer team participated in the Lincolnville Soccer Tournament on Aug. 6 and 7.

The all-girl team tied their first game 1-1 against the Peoria Soccer Club. They lost game two 0-3 to the J. Marine team of St. Louis, but won game three 2-0 over Sagamon State United.

Members of the team are

Jones, Tia Reese, Holly Taylor, Addie Lenzie, Sherry Simpson, Jennifer Wheeler, Jennifer Taylor, Jennifer Harper, Jennifer Harris, Angie Jones, Kelley Kessler, Lia Mendoza, Lynette Wheeler, Bridget Konrad, Gretchen Mink and Shawn Oliver.

Also attending the tournament were Shawn and James Petroski and their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jim Petroski.

James is a member of the Elks 74 team, and Shawn is a member of the Elks 77 team. Shawn and his Elks 77 teammates earned first-place trophies. They won two games and tied one. Game one, they won 4-1 over Liebe, St. Louis. Game two was a 2-2 tie against the Land of Lincoln Park, Springfield, and game three, they captured the first place trophy by beating the McDonalds 77 team from Collinsville 7-1.

Shawn and James Petroski are the grandsons of Carmen Breckner. They are the sons of Jim Petroski, a baseball coach at the Mitchell Athletic Club ball field.

Pontoon Beach seniors to hold bazaar

The Pontoon Beach Senior Citizens will hold its annual craft bazaar from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 5 in the Senior Center, 3910 Illinois 11.

Those who wish a table at the bazaar, which will include a bake sale and refreshments, should call JOY at 797-6871.

South Carolina; and Carolyn Begood, Aiken, S.C.

Boswell's son Dean Boswell, who was visiting in Forest Park, Ga., decided to remain and attend school there. He will stay with his sister, Delora.

Attending the adult vacation

Bible school at Pontoon Baptist Church last week were Frances and Larry Brake, Barbara and Gary Chaney, Larry and Barbara Rigby, Harold and Connie McBride, Bob and Beulah Kraus, Ruth King, Sylvia Massman, Agnes and Frank Lindsay and Sharon Ryan.

The book studied was "Being with and Sharing Faith with Others," taught by the Rev. Kevin Kerr.

Crystal Breeze Krause celebrated her first birthday at the home of her grandparents, Mrs. Reba Hunt on July 29.

A teddy bear theme was used. Refreshments were served to her brothers Matthew, Mark and Chris; her parents, Mike and Barbara Krause; Fred Hunt; Tony Hunt and daughters Lisa and Pamela Hunt; Roger and Carol Pitts and their children Roger, Nicky and Jennifer; and Becky Hunt.

Workshop

CHURCH ART and architecture was the topic of a workshop in Springfield, Ill., sponsored by the Springfield Catholic Diocese. In attendance from Holy Family Catholic Church were, from left, Bonnie Miller, Patricia Knollman, Barbara Reedy, Sister Mary Angeline Bilderbost, O.P., Dan Vizer and Edith Forbas.

Shrine to hold vision workshop

Radio Information Service at the National Shrine of Our Lady of the Snows, Belleville, will sponsor a Low Vision Workshop from 9:45 to 11:30 a.m. Aug. 18 in the Dr. Tom Dooley Center.

The topic will be "Our Bank from Home," with guests Al Herrman, computer trainer, and Sue Goodman, manager of the Crestwood branch, both representing Roosevelt Bank of St. Louis.

Those who are blind or visually impaired may find the presentation interesting and helpful for their banking arrangements; however, the workshop is designed to help those who are not totally blind, but have partial sight.

Radio Information Service is closed-circuit broadcasting to the area blind and disabled.

About 250 volunteers read newspapers, books, magazines, advertisements and other information on the air daily to 9,000 blind, disabled and nursing home people who have a special radio tune to Radio Information Service.

Eagles help with boy's medical bills

The Eagles Auxiliary have donated $200 to the trust fund at Central Bank for Brian Mizell, a local boy who had an operation July 6 to repair a hole in his heart.

The donation was approved at the last regular meeting of the Eagles Auxiliary in July.

Seven new applicants were accepted at the meeting. The new members will be initiated Aug. 25.

The meeting was opened by Visiting Chairman Dee Klesh sent get-well cards to Ann Sporeck, Bonny Jacobs and Floyd Kulp.

Secretary Vincine Zerlan read an invitation from Chapter 4083 (Effingham) to the state conference being held in Effingham Sept. 9. She also read a thank-you card from the Multiple Sclerosis Association for the auxiliary's $25 donation.

"Good of the Auxiliary" was won by Helen Lipchik and Bonny Brown.

Lunch was served by Flo Stokes and Katy Kostoff.

Seniors plan dance with western theme

The Granite City Council of Seniors will host a country western theme dance Aug. 22 at the Granite City Township Hall, 2060 Delmar Ave.

The evening will start with refreshments at 6 p.m., with dancing at 7 p.m. The Alley Kats will perform.

All people 55 and older are invited to attend. A $2 donation is requested at the door.

Seniors who need transportation should call Gertrude Barkley at 878-8039 before Aug. 15. A transportation fee will be 25 cent one way or 50 cents round trip.

They also visited her nephew in Ocean Side, Calif.

A baby shower for Liz (Rogenski) Fowler was held July 31 at the Madison Recreation Center. The event was given by her family. The stuffed animal table decorations were given as prizes. Laura Guenther and Joann Steele assisted in opening the gifts. A buffet lunch was served to 65 people.

The St. Mary's Ladies softball team finished in second place in its league.

The team's coach was John Lake. Members of the team were Pam Smallman, Kim McCune, Tina Dew, Angie Dillard, Darlene Mangiaracino, Toni Short, Barb Brown, Jean Zaring, Teri Johnson, Lori Schaeffer, Teri Lake, Lisa Dohmal and Becky Cooper.

Teri Lake and Tracy Whitecotton have returned from a week-end trip by chartered bus to Red Rock, Okla., where they played Ote-Missouri bingo.

Ralph and Louise Kern have returned from a trip to Chula Vista, Calif., where they attended the wedding of Mrs. Kern's sister, Gloria Guthrie, and Charles Smith.

The ceremony was held July 23 at a Methodist church in San Diego. Mrs. Kern was the vocal soloist.

The St. Stanislaus Lodge of the Polish Hall in Madison held a brief meeting Aug. 7.

President Stan Serwatka announced the group's annual barbecue will be held this Saturday. Carry-outs will be available, beginning at noon, and the dining room will open at 4 p.m. There will be dancing inside

Hope alone won't stop drug abuse

If you suspect your child is experimenting with or abusing drugs, don't just sit back and hope the problem will go away.

Sharon Erbe, community educator and marketing representative for Hyland Adolescent Center, a treatment program for teens 13 to 18 years old with chemical dependency or psychiatric disorders, says the younger a child starts to use drugs (a classification that includes alcohol), the sicker that child will get. And the longer the abuse continues, the more difficult it is to cure.

Erbe suggests that parents who have suspicions about their child should start a journal of the child's activities. Write down all the facts, including dates that make you suspect drug abuse is occurring.

Be sure to include patterns of behavior, symptoms and physical changes. Keep the journal for three to four weeks and then talk to a professionally trained counselor.

Drug-abuse treatment centers offer free assessments, so take advantage of this service. Bring your journal for a professional evaluation of what is going on with your child.

Joan Bell, a state-certified substance-abuse counselor with the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse St. Louis, cautions parents who suspect their child of substance abuse not to rush into a confrontation.

She says that one of the symptoms of the disease is an inability to discuss or admit the abuse. This means the response of the child will be denial. Accusing, nagging, ranting and raving will only aggravate the problem.

Bell says the first step in getting help for your child is to educate yourself about the disease. She suggests parents attend awareness meetings held at various treatment centers and also at the council. Her agency sponsors a film series on substance abuse held every Monday evening. She recommends the meetings held at Weldon Springs Hospital because they have a parent and adolescent focus.

Bell suggests parents find a support group to help them become educated on the subject. She recommends Parents ALAN-ON since the most popular drug among teen-agers still is alcohol.

Bell does not recommend drug

ABCs for Parents

By Jane Cosby

testing for adolescents. She believes this does not accomplish anything constructive. The test only reveals whether the child has used drugs; it does not reveal whether the child is addicted or the extent of the abuse.

Instead of drug testing, Bell tells parents to have their child evaluated. A professional assessment by a trained substance-abuse counselor will reveal whether or not the child does have a drug-abuse problem, what stage the disease is in, what drug or drugs the child is using and what type of treatment, if any, is warranted for the child.

The National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse does conduct substance abuse assessments and then provides referrals to treatment programs. After an assessment, parents can then choose a treatment program providing the level of care needed by their child.

Parents who wish more information may call the National Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse St. Louis at (314) 962-3356.

For a free copy of "Drug Facts," a booklet on the symptoms and effects of commonly abused drugs published by the Hyland Center, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Drug Facts, ABCs for Parents, Suite 108, 1215 Fern Ridge Parkway, St. Louis, Mo. 63141.

FEET FIRST

HEELS FIRST

By Dr. Claude Hiles

Runners should mind on their heels, not on the balls of their feet. The heel should hit the ground first, then the arch comes down, then the ball of the foot and toes. Runners take off from the ball of the foot, and then are into the next step. Landing on the balls of the foot is not good because the calf muscle never gets a chance to stretch. It stays contracted. That is how calf muscles become short and tight. Any kind of running makes the calf muscle shorter and tighter, but running on the balls of the foot worsens the condition. Tight calf muscles are one of the main causes of shin splints, Achilles tendonitis and muscle pulls.

For the record

Oct. 11 deadline for voter registration

Madison County Clerk Evelyn M. Bowles has announced plans for the general election to be held on Tuesday, Nov. 8.

The president of the United States and many other officials will be elected.

"College students may take advantage of the various places of registration before returning to school, in order to be eligible to vote in November," she said.

"Absentee ballot applications and information must be secured from the county clerk's office. Simply write to the county clerk for the information after you have registered."

"Oct. 11 will be the last day to register to be eligible to vote in the general election."

Miss Bowles said deputies from the clerk's office will be at the following locations:

Sept. 10: Granite City, National Food, 3100 Madison Ave., 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Sept. 13: Granite City, Belleville Area College, 4950 Maryville Road, 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m.

Sept. 15: Granite City, Belleville Area

College, 4950 Maryville Road, 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Sept. 24: Venice, Red Fox Grocery, 2400 N. 1st St., 7 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Oct. 1: Granite City, K Mart, 3655 Nameoki Road, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

Oct. 11: Granite City, City Clerk's office, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Venice, City Comptroller's office, 9 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Bowles said, "You may also register with the following city/village clerks and librarians: Granite City, Robert Stevens,

City Hall, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Nameoki Town Hall, Donald L. Ridgeway, in the township supervisor's office, by appointment, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Venice, Comptroller's office, 8 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Venice Township supervisor's office, 1502 Fifth St., Madison, 9 a.m. to 12 and 1 to 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

to be borne entirely by the district.

State Rep. Wyvetter Young of East St. Louis introduced and was successful in obtaining passage of House Bill 196 by an overwhelming majority in both the Illinois House and Senate.

House Bill 196 calls for a referendum to increase the drainage district tax rate limit from 21 cents to 47 cents on $100 valuation for five years, and 31 cents thereafter.

The increase would provide a $7.5 million local share of the $23 million plan for overhaul of pumping stations, flood gates and drainage ditches.

"These repairs are needed to prevent flooding that could be worse than the floodgate collapses in October 1986," the spokesman said.

"The proposal also will provide $400,000 per year for maintenance of 57 deep wells to be installed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. It is estimated this would save more than $2 million in water damage and sewer treatment costs annually around the district.

"A person with a $60,000 home would pay $94 a year in taxes to the district, compared to the present $42 a year. On a $30,000 home, the tax would change to $47 from $21."

"Efforts for passage of the referendum will require a great investment of time and financial resources by many organizations throughout the district. Examples of time investment:

"Speakers bureau to address service clubs and professional organizations in the district.

"Endorsement and involvement of Central Committees and precinct committeemen of both political parties.

"Endorsement and involvement of labor unions and labor councils.

"Endorsement and involvement of mayors and City Councils.

"Subcommittees are being formed to raise funds to pay for engineering and finalize a strategy to get out the vote.

"We hope that every member of the chamber will step forward and help in the passage of this referendum. There is no room for doubting as to whether we will be successful. It is something we must do."

Give home a face lift with new front door

By Al Schneider
Mr. Tinker

Your front door gives visitors their first impression of your home.

Because of this fact, it is important that its appearance set the tone for the kind of impression you want your residence to convey to guests and passers-by.

If the door is weathering, warping or just plain falling apart from old age, you may want to replace it with one of the many new, attractive and energy-efficient models on the market.

I have some helpful hints on selecting a door that is right for you.

First, new doors come in several varieties and styles.

You may wish to simply replace the front door with another one or purchase a pre-hung door in a frame that is both weatherstripped and drilled out for the locking mechanism.

Pre-hung doors are generally slightly more expensive.

However, in the long run, I believe that pre-hung doors can save you time, money and aggravation.

The most difficult part about buying a pre-hung door is ordering the correct size. Many factors need to be taken into consideration.

I always measure the existing door's rough opening, the framing in which old jamb rests. I can easily find the proper size by removing the interior door casing. With the casing removed, I have an open look at the jamb edges and the shim space.

I then carefully measure from below the bottom sill to the rough header at the top of the opening.

I also measure the space between the vertical studs.

With these rough estimates, it is possible then to order a door that is approximately one-half to 1 inch smaller than the rough opening.

If you decide to just replace your old door with a new model, leaving the existing jamb and threshold, I recommend that you attempt to find a door that is just slightly larger than the old one.

I remove the old door, position it on the new one and trace perfectly sized cut lines.

Finally, when you have made the right cuts and placed the hardware properly, the door will pop in place.

I also carefully measure the height, width and thickness of the door to be removed.

I always purchase a door at least as large as the jamb opening and no more than 2 or 3 inches taller and wider than the opening.

If a door is much larger than these measurements, glue joints will weaken on extensive cuts.

Once the door is in place, you may want to also install new insulated thresholds to prevent cold air and grime from blowing into your home.

They are very inexpensive and can be raised and lowered with the turn of a screw.

If you need additional advice on how to install a pre-hung or standard door, feel free to call me.

I can be at Central Hardware Mr. Tinker Hotline, (314) 946-3000. I'd be happy to help.

Computers helping fight prescription drug abuse

Illinois has entered into an agreement with the State of Indiana to share the technology of the Illinois' Triplicate Prescription Control Program.

In 1982, the Governor's Task Force on Prescription Drug Abuse reviewed the Illinois Triplicate Prescription Program. As a result, the task force recommended that a new system be developed to provide a stronger diversion of abuse of prescription drugs.

In 1984, the Illinois Department of Alcoholism & Substance Abuse was charged with the responsibility for existing triplicate system operations and continued development of a new system.

The department's triplicate prescription control system incorporates the use of sophisticated computerized data collection and processing techniques to produce accurate and timely reports on the prescribing, dispensing, and consuming of Schedule II designated prescription drugs.

They include the following classes of drugs: narcotics (morphine, demerol, dilaudid); amphetamines; glaucetamide (doriden); methamphetamine; pentasone (talwin); or phenmetrazine (preludin).

The department processes an estimated 20,000 prescription forms per month that are submitted by pharmacies to the department's Springfield office once the dispensing transaction has been completed.

The goal of the triplicate program is to "protect citizens of Illinois by rooting out profiteers who capitalize on the human misery associated with substance abuse."

William T. Atkins, director of the Illinois Department of Alcoholism & Substance Abuse, said, "Throughout the Thompson administration, a clear and consistent policy exists to providing the most effective alcoholism and substance abuse treatment, prevention, and education services."

"This administration has developed the triplicate prescription program as part of its continuing effort to help strengthen Illinois' substance abuse prevention activities."

Illinois has cooperated with Indiana in providing technical assistance with program development. The department also has sent representatives to Indiana to testify before a Public Health Committee and a Special Study Committee of the Indiana Legislature to proclaim the benefits of Illinois' program.

Atkins said, "We believe the Illinois program can serve as a model for a nationwide system, so Illinois seeks to share its success with diversion control. By using our program, Indiana hopes to eliminate many loopholes that currently exist which allow drug diverters and traffickers to evade prosecution simply by crossing state lines."

"Also, Illinois reports that diversion of two of the most abused drugs, hydro-morphone (dilaudid) and phenmetrazine (preludin) have been reduced by more than 80 percent.

Use of the triplicate form in illegal transactions to obtain Schedule II drugs has been reduced over 83 percent due to a newly designed form not conducive to theft, alteration or forgery."

Mary Gaughan, executive director of the Health Professions Bureau, the Indiana state agency implementing the new triplicate prescription control system, said, "Illinois and the Department of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse officials have been instrumental in helping us pass legislation enabling us to develop a triplicate program."

Gaughan and other state officials toured the Triplicate Prescription facilities in Springfield to get a better understanding of how the program operates.

DASA representatives are currently working with other bordering states to help develop triplicate prescription programs. Indiana's triplicate system will go into effect July 1, 1989.

Man charged in fatal collision

A reckless homicide charge has been issued in connection with an accident June 21 that claimed the life of a Collinsville area man.

The charge against Gary Wilson, 36, of Pontoon Beach, was issued July 29 by the Madison County state's attorney's office. Three witnesses alleged Wilson's car was traveling north on Illinois 111 three-tenths of a mile south of State Aid 35 at a high speed when it went into the southbound lane and struck a car driven by John Cline of Arlington Street head-on, according to Pontoon Beach police.

Cline, 36, was pronounced dead at St. Elizabeth Medical Center shortly after the collision. Wilson was released on bond.

Pontoon Beach police

Battery by man alleged

Ryan E. Smith, 28, 2429 E. 25th St., was booked July 24 for battery. Mona Lisa Duffield, 4052 Bruene Ave., alleged Smith pushed his way into her residence, struck her and threw her to the floor. He was arrested there and was held at the Venice Police Station prior to being released on his own recognizance.

Granite City police

Two warrants served

Billy M. Hutchinson, 27, 2232 E. 25th St., was served two warrants, alleging residential burglary and battery, while at the Granite City Police Station on July 29.

Black 1979 Olds missing

Joanne Toolin, 2001 Washington Ave., reported the theft of her black 1979 Oldsmobile auto, some keys and $471 at 1:40 a.m. July 30.

She said two men entered her home and used the telephone. After the pair left, she discovered her car was missing. The men did not look familiar to her, Toolin said.

Leather case, $150 gone

John B. Richards, Rockwell, Texas, reported July 29 that while he was visiting relatives in the 2100 block of Nevada Avenue his parked auto was entered and a leather case containing a wallet, credit cards and $150 was stolen.

Burglars obtain tools

In a burglary at Wells Tire Co., 2248 Avenue Ave., reported July 29 by manager Mike Thaxton, the intruders stole quantities of tools belonging to mechanics George A. Forster and Jerry D. B. Bins.

Estimated value of the tools stolen from each man was $1,000. Three half-inch-drive air wrenches valued at $225 also were missing. Entry was gained by smashing a panel in an overhead door.

Auto speakers stolen

Louis Edward Benham, 25, 2821 Denver St., reported the burglary July 28 of two speakers valued at $300 from his car parked in front of his home.

Stolen car found burned

Lee Baker, Cottage Hills, a Granite City Steel employee, reported at 3:35 a.m. July 30 that his white 1981 Buick Regal was stolen from the plant's 16th Street parking lot.

Venice police reported the same night that the vehicle had been destroyed by fire at the Venice riverfront area.

Headlight charge filed

Larry W. Sorenson, 31, 2431 Lincoln Ave., was charged with illegal transportation of alcohol and driving without a left headlight at 3:30 a.m. July 30 at Kate Street and Lincoln Avenue.

9 young people booked

for trespassing on lot. Nine young people, including three juvenile girls, were charged with criminal trespass to property at 9:20 p.m. July 29 when officers made a third trip to the parking area adjacent to Wendy's Restaurant, Nameoki Road, where groups of young people allegedly had gathered during the evening.

"No loitering" signs are posted in the area and complaints about the gatherings had been received, reports said. Those taken to police headquarters and charged were:

Mark S. Tripp, 20, 4123 Division St., Pontoon Beach; Dawn A. Martin, 17, 2629 Lincoln Ave.; Michael A. Leonard, 17, 4125 Division St., Pontoon Beach; Ray E. English, 17, 4734 Lake Drive, Pontoon Beach; Larry L. Briggs, 19, 2425 Wilson Ave.; and Eric M. Elders, 17, 4072 Bruene Drive, Pontoon Beach.

The three juvenile girls were 13, 15 and 16 years old. Tripp also was served with a warrant alleging battery.

DUIs

DUI, lane charge filed

Sandra Dawn Minceff, 18, 349 Chain of Rocks Road, Mitchell, was arrested at 2:33 a.m. Aug. 9 at West 22nd Street and Missouri Avenue and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol and improper lane usage.

Police reported observing her cross the railroad tracks at 20th Street, leave the roadway and nearly strike a utility pole and some parked cars, and return to the roadway and continue north in the southbound lane of West 22nd. Bail was set at $302 cash.

Arrested after crash

Madison police arrested Kimberly Renee Reymoun, 19, of 1717 Delmar Ave., on a charge of driving under the influence of alcohol, at 1:48 a.m. July 31 following an accident in the 1500 block of Seventh Street, Madison. Reymoun's car struck a parked auto after allegedly passing a stop sign. Reymoun also was charged with failure to reduce speed to avoid an accident, illegal transportation of alcohol and disobeying a stop sign. She and a passenger, Diana S. Shumate, were treated for minor injuries at St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

Three charges filed

Craig S. Vizer, 26, 1645 Spruce St., was arrested July 30 at 18th and State streets and charged with driving under the influence of alcohol, driving while his license was revoked and improper use of registration.

DUI follows accident

Keith E. Jefferson, 28, Hazelwood, Mo., was charged with driving under the influence of alcohol July 30 following an accident on Illinois 3 at 8:09 p.m.

A car allegedly driven by Jefferson was going north in the southbound lane when it ran head-on into an auto car driven by Richard M. Wilson, 26, Wood River. Both Wilson and Jefferson were taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center by

Granite City Fire Department

Ambulance. Jefferson was released to the police following treatment. Jefferson was also charged with driving in the wrong lane.

Matthew 28:20 "...lo, I am with you always."

The Scripture states that heaven and earth will pass away, but His Word will never pass away. His Word states that He will never leave or forsake us. This promise belongs to us today and He will not take it away from us.

This being the case then, know that He is with you. Whether you feel His presence or not, He is there. In the midst of trouble and trial, He is there. Whether you have a spiritual or physical need, He stands ready to help you.

The simplest way to prove that He is near is to pray. Just make your need known to God and be sincere. The answer you need is already on the way.

He is with you. Today.

UNLIKE THE MOVIES, WHEN YOU HIT A POWER LINE, THE SHOW'S OVER.

In the movies, the monster doesn't let anything stop him. Not even a few power lines.

But in the real world, a power line will stop anybody.

So before you do any work outside, remember that a metal ladder, a TV antenna, and even a tree trimmer can conduct electricity.

And don't forget to keep the kids away from utility poles, electric substations, and trees near power lines. Because we'd hate to see anyone get into trouble with a power line.

Unless, of course, it's in the movies.

14A—Thursday, August 11, 1988, Granite City (Ill.) Press-Record

Burglar obtains 2 fans
Carol Buzick, 23, 1915A Benton St., reported July 28 that a burglar had broken into her residence and taken two three-speed fans.

Air conditioner taken
A.G. Overholt, 48, 2431 E. 23rd St., reported July 28 that a burglar had taken a window air conditioner from a vacant rental house he owns.

Warrant arrests made
Billy Mathis Hutchinson, 27, and Lance Edward Hutchinson, 23, both of 2232 E. 25th St., were arrested on warrants July 28 at 3308 Kirkpatrick homes. Billy was arrested on a warrant for burglary and Lance on five Venice warrants: failure to appear on battery, resisting arrest, driving while intoxicated, driving with a suspended license and failure to wear a seat belt.

Commercial tools gone
Two commercial tools, a power trimmer valued at $353 and a hedge trimmer worth $348, were stolen from the rear yard at the home of Donald L. Sturm, 2713 Harding Blvd., he reported Aug. 5.

Incident ends with three charges filed

Matthew A. Scanlon, 31, 1725 Maple St., was booked on two state counts of battery and criminal damage to property following an incident at 3:56 a.m. Aug. 6 in the 1700 block of Chestnut Street.

Donna K. Bryant, 2060 Edwardsville Road, Madison, said she and Scanlon were about to leave the 1700 block of Chestnut when he asked her to take him to Venice.

When she refused he slapped her face, she said.

George W. Holiday, 19, 2050 Edwardsville Road, Bryant's brother, intervened and alleged Scanlon struck him on the right elbow and forearm with a pipe.

Holiday said he again tried to help his sister by swinging a piece of wood and Bryant took the pipe from Scanlon and allegedly hit Scanlon on the forehead.

After Scanlon chased Bryant, who dropped the pipe in the street, Scanlon picked up the pipe and allegedly used it to break two windows and the windshield of a 1979 auto belonging to Bryant's mother, Barbara K. McGhee, 2050 Edwardsville Road, Madison.

Scanlon was sitting in a truck at the scene when police arrived. A four-foot-long piece of pipe was recovered near the truck, reports said.

Scanlon was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for treatment of a laceration to the forehead before being booked at police headquarters.

Cannabis charge filed
Seeing three youths in a wooded area at the rear of Central Hardware in the Crossroads Plaza Shopping Center, an officer investigated and arrested two persons.

Kevin D. Bellovich, 17, 2280 Benton St., allegedly had a clear plastic bag containing 19 hand-rolled cannabis cigarettes. He was booked on a state charge of unlawful possession of cannabis.

Arvil Chester Hartley, 17, 920 Thorngate Drive, Mitchell, was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol. A third youth, 16, was released to his grandmother.

6 charges against pair
After stopping a car for speeding at 15th Street and Washington Avenue at 2:35 a.m. Aug. 6, officers arrested the driver, David L. Beebe, 22, 1302 Granite Ave., charging him with speeding and illegal transportation of alcohol. He was released upon posting his driver license.

Eric J. Kloppe, 20, 2153A Benton St., a passenger in the car, was served with three warrants alleging criminal damage to property, harassment by telephone and disorderly conduct. He also was charged with illegal possession of alcohol.

Tractor-trailer damaged
Mike Kachadorian, Chokolia, reported Aug. 5 that someone broke into a tractor-trailer at Luria Bros., 2520 E. 23rd St., and stole two stereo speakers valued at $80. The thief apparently started the truck engine but was unable to release the brakes and burned the rubber off a wheel, causing an estimated $600 worth of damage.

Parked van burglarized
Joyce Davenport, 2361 Clark Ave., reported Aug. 8 that a burglar had broken into her parked van and taken a tackle box and lures valued at $150, a 5-inch black and white television set valued at $60, and school supplies valued at $6.

Cash taken from car
Gary L. Harkins, 22, 1715 Delmar Ave., reported Aug. 8 that a burglar entered his car parked at the 7-11 store, 19th Street and Nedringhaus Avenue, and took $29 cash and two cassette tapes valued at $20.

Burglar takes mattress
Dawn M. Tomshack, 22, 1404 Kirkpatrick Homes, reported the burglary Aug. 7 of a full-size mattress and box springs valued at $100 from her apartment.

Arrested, injured in fall
Paul Edward Cavanaugh, 32, 2116 E. 24th St., was arrested Aug. 7 at East 24th and Bromley Avenue and charged with assault. Deanna Pauline Cavanaugh, 26, 2540 Parkview Apartments, reported they had been at a barbecue when he became abusive.

She reported trying to leave, but he allegedly broke out the head lights on her car and chased her, threatening to beat her. Police arrived and arrested him; when they later forced him to leave a squad car, he reportedly fell to a concrete surface, striking his nose and face. He was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center for treatment and was returned to the police station.

Glen A. Wofford, 31, 1304 Rhodes St., reported Aug. 7 that a burglar had broken into his pickup truck and taken a .35-caliber blue steel automatic pistol valued at $75 from the glove compartment.

Battery by man alleged
Chad D. Carpenter, 19, 2913 Sunset Drive, was arrested Aug. 7 in the parking lot of Charlie's Restaurant and booked for battery of Arthur L. Chester, 40, East Alton.

Shed, garage burglarized
Stephanie R. Edgington, 23, 2228 Delmar Ave., reported Aug. 6 that a burglar had broken into her shed and garage. Missing from the shed were a shop vacuum cleaner, two large coolers, two small coolers, two lanterns and a camp stove. Missing from the garage was a power lawn mower. Also taken was a 6-foot aluminum ladder.

Apartment burglarized
Dawn M. Costoff and Kim K. Cuffey, 2437 E. 24th St., reported Aug. 8 that a burglar had broken into their apartment and taken a pair of diamond earrings and a portable cassette stereo.

Auto, van burglarized
Robert D. Cann, 28, 1751 Walnut St., reported Aug. 7 that his car and van had been burglarized. Taken from the car were an in-dash AM/FM cassette stereo valued at $50 and a 50-amp alternator valued at $55. Taken from the van were an in-dash AM/FM cassette stereo worth $75, a cordless drill valued at $200 and a printing press level.

Truck window smashed, radar detector stolen
Eric D. Smith, 19, 2510 W. 20th St., reported Aug. 3 that a burglar had smashed the driver's window of his truck with a concrete rock and taken a radar detector valued at $270.

The rock was also reported to have damaged the inside panel of the passenger door.

Burglar gets chain saw
David Krause, 29, 2617 E. 24th St., reported the burglary from his garage Aug. 2 of a chain saw, tackle box and tackle valued at $50, a rod and reel valued at $75, and other assorted rods and reels.

Gold jewelry missing
Dawn M. Tomshack, 22, 1404 Kirkpatrick Homes, returned from a trip and discovered a kitchen window near a rear door had been broken and someone had entered her home, she reported Aug. 5.

Immediately determined to be missing were a gold chain valued at $285, two other gold chains worth $100, a jewelry box, and a pitcher and bowl set valued at $70.

Pictures had been removed from the wall but were not taken by the intruder.

Man, 17, charged after fight over lawn mower
Derek S. Stearns, 17, 100 Briarhaven Drive, was arrested Aug. 8 on allegations of theft and battery. Betty Stearns, 55, 100 Briarhaven Drive, told police she and Derek Stearns had fought over the use of her lawn mower and she had been pushed to the ground, causing a laceration to her right heel.

He was arrested, with the mower, at 2504 Joyce St., police said. Bail was set at $104 cash.

Man arrested, booked on 3 charges by police
Tandy A. Ifland, 27, 2904 Dale Ave., was arrested Aug. 8 after allegedly kicking in the door at 2520 Parkway Drive, Apartment 2. He was arrested at the dead end of Wilson Avenue near Dale Avenue.

Julie Hills, 23, 2431 Adams St., said she and Ifland had been at a tavern earlier in the evening and he had become upset when she knocked a pack of cigarettes onto the floor. Outside, she reported, he struck her in the face.

They then went to the Parkway address, where she reportedly told him to leave and he then kicked in the door. Ifland was charged with disorderly conduct, battery and criminal damage to property.

Prostitution charged
Sherry A. Ivory, 22, 500 S. 5th St., Brooklyn, was arrested Aug. 2 at the Granite City Lodge, 1200 19th St., and charged with prostitution. A cab driver who called police about the theft of three $20 bills reportedly took police to Ivory. Police said she alleged he had paid her the money at a taxi parked behind trucks at the Trucker Supply Lot, 1800 Benton St. Ivory was fined $75.

Battery in cab alleged Ronald G. Harshbarger, 34, 2204 Hodges Ave., was arrested Aug. 2 for battery. Roy M. Pulley, 34, 200 McCambridge Ave., Madison, a cab driver for Madison County Cab Co., reported he picked up Harshbarger as a fare and that the man began beating him on the shoulders and back as he drove. Harshbarger, arrested in his back yard, was released on a notice to appear.

Truck stolen from lot
Ray Switzer, owner of the Madison Sunoco Service Station, 1903 Edwardsville Road, told police a thief took a U-Haul truck from his parking lot between midnight and 5 a.m. Aug. 8.

Truck wheels, tires gone

Trucker robbed of $185
James Chenault, a trucker from Ohio, told police two women entered his truck cab while he was parked at Gateway Midstate Truck Plaza, 699 Illinois 203, on the evening of Aug. 3 and took $185 from the pants he was wearing.

Drive-through beating
Richard L. Cohen, 29, 2161 Dawna Place, was arrested Aug. 5 on an allegation of battery. He allegedly reached through the window of a car driven by Vincent Smith, of 88 Briarview Lane, and punched Smith in the face while both vehicles were in the drive-through window at the Jack in the Box restaurant, 3330 Nameoki Road. Ball Cohen was set at $102 cash.

$300 guitar stolen
Boyle Bell, 20, 2583 Washington Ave., reported the burglary Aug. 4 of an acoustic guitar valued at $300 from the Bethel Chapel, West 25th Street and Ohio Avenue.

Foot chase nets arrest of store-theft suspect
James Robinson, 28, East St. Louis, was arrested Aug. 4 at the Shop and Save store, 3250 Nameoki Road, an alleged shoplifter. An employee there reported she saw Robinson leave the store with a carton of cigarettes in his two men while he was outside and lifted his shirt to reveal three cartons of cigarettes.

Another employee, Dennis Vaters, came to her aid and Robinson allegedly struck him in the face. As the woman was pushed against a car, she grabbed the cigarettes and the suspect fled on foot. Police gave chase and cornered Robinson at Coddage Junior High School near the gym.

Michael Matthews, 28, 2881B Madison Ave., reported the burglary of a booster-equalizer valued at $60.

Car stereo items taken
Kevin Jones, 17, 2624 Meadowlane, reported the burglary Aug. 3 of a pair of speakers valued at $100, and an equalizer valued at $70 from his car parked in front of 1910 Delmar Ave.

Blue 1985 Buick stolen
The staff at Ram Auto Sales, 2320 Nameoki Road, reported the theft of a blue 1985 4-door Buick Park Avenue from its lot Aug. 4.

Red motorcycle stolen
Vern L. Saggio, 1538 Johnson Road, reported Aug. 4 the theft of a red 1986 Honda XR80 motorcycle from her garage.

Nabbed at high school
Gordon D. Caldwell, 21, 1237 Robin St. Venice, was arrested shortly after midnight July 28 while allegedly fleeing from Madison High School. Madison police had surprised two men inside the school. A chase across the school roof followed and Caldwell was arrested by Granite City police, who had been called to assist. He was charged with burglary.

Truck stolen from lot
Ray Switzer, owner of the Madison Sunoco Service Station, 1903 Edwardsville Road, told police a thief took a U-Haul truck from his parking lot between midnight and 5 a.m. Aug. 8.

Truck wheels, tires gone

Trucker robbed of $185

Law to set energy standards for home appliances

A federal law passed last year will set minimum efficiency standards for major home appliances.

The National Appliance Energy Conservation Act replaced the varying state requirements with energy-conservation standards that are uniform throughout the nation.

The standards are being phased in over three years, allowing manufacturers adequate time to develop energy-saving new appliances while preserving popular sizes and features.

The law was supported by a broad coalition of appliance manufacturers and utilities. It will benefit consumers by making available more cost-effective, energy-efficient appliances and enhance consumers' control of their energy bills by decreasing appliance operating costs, says the Edison Electric Institute, the association of investor-owned electric utilities.

Included under the standards are new refrigerators, freezers, room air conditioners, dishwashers, clothes washers, and gas dryers, ranges and ovens.

The law will ensure that energy-efficient features now found in all new models of dishwashers, clothes washers and gas dryers will not be eliminated from future products. Such features include the air-dry cycle on a dishwasher, the cold-rinse cycle on a clothes washer and the electric ignition pilot on a gas dryer.

Actual dollar savings per household will depend on specific models used. Compared to 1985 models, AHAM estimates the new standards will reduce appliance energy use in 1990 models by at least 15 percent for freezers, 14 percent for refrigerators, 11 percent for air conditioners.

Police arrest, charge alleged burglar

GRANITE CITY — An illicit early morning visit resulted in a residential burglary charge against a Pontoon Beach man.

Jeffery A. Martin, 26, 2964A Lake St., was charged Monday.

Kimberly A. Arnold, Granite City, reported Aug. 5 she had awakened while sleeping on the couch at the home of her brother, Rick Arnold, 2111 Lincoln Ave., and allegedly saw Martin leaving the room carrying her purse.

She shouted at Martin who fled through the front door and ran down the street. Martin allegedly had entered the house by unlatching a storm door.

Police were called, but they were unable to locate Martin at that time.

Later, her brother found the purse in an alley at 23rd Street, Arnold said. Missing from the purse were $100 and personal papers.

Madison police

Man chases car burglar

Jonathan F. Bunch, of the 1500 block of Sixth Street, told police he chased away a car burglar Aug. 7. Bunch had gone out at about 5 a.m. to buy a newspaper. When he returned home, he said, he noticed a man getting out of an auto belonging to a man he knew who lived at the same address. When Bunch yelled at the would-be burglar, the man dropped a citizen band radio and a flashlight and fled. Bunch chased him, but the suspect escaped. Police searched for a bare-chested man with several tattoos, but could not find him.

$500 stereo system gone

Innapah Chanthavissouk of St. Louis told police he went into Ray's Lounge, 1112 State St., at 1:30 a.m. Aug. 6. When he came out a short time later, his pickup truck had been burglarized. Taken were a new stereo system and equalizer valued at $500.

Theft warrant served

Jeffrey D. Gean, 22, of 2226 Lee Ave., was arrested shortly before 5 a.m. Aug. 6 while sitting in Ralph & Charlie's Steak House, 1431 Fourth St. A police officer recognized him as the person named in a Madison County Sheriff's Department warrant charging theft of more than $300 value.

Concern over criminal-justice funding

The first Criminal Justice Awareness Day was held in Springfield, with Anthony Scillia warning that "reducing the funds available for criminal justice agencies is a risky and ill-advised road to travel."

Speakers included DuPage County State's Attorney James E. Ryan and Darrell Smith, Ill.

nois Probation and Court Services Association president.

Scillia, president of the Illinois Correctional Association, said, "It is necessary to keep state legislators aware of the continuing, pressing needs of the various components of the criminal justice system."

"While resources have dwindle, the mandate by Illinois citizens has been for increased public protection from criminals, increased prosecution of law breakers, increased community supervision for non-violent offenders, and increased imprisonment for criminals who have used violent methods in committing their crimes."

'Competitiveness' buzzword for opportunism

To the editor:

"Competitiveness!" It's certainly a buzzword that has run amok here in Washington. Yet, its true meaning seems to have been lost in a haze of political opportunism.

Not long ago, "competitiveness" meant producing a better product at lower cost. The idea was to build a better automobile, better video recorder, or even a better mousetrap than any of our foreign competitors, for a price less than anyone else dares charge. Oh, those were the good old days.

Unfortunately, the definition of "competitiveness" in Washington has been clouded with political rhetoric to the point that it now means simply, "talk about building a better mousetrap... and blame U.S. corporations."

While the Democratic Party talks about tearing down trade barriers and building up American productive capacity, they continually cry for measures designed to increase the cost of labor and, as a result, reduce the ability of American products to compete abroad.

Not that the national media has paid much attention, but the nation's productivity has fared pretty well during the Reagan era. The Labor Department recently reported that U.S. manufacturing productivity is rising strongly, even in the sixth year of economic expansion.

Since 1981, productivity has risen at the fastest annual rate in postwar history, four times as fast as under President Jimmy Carter. In fact, manufacturing productivity has grown at an annual rate of 4.2 percent between 1981 and 1987. This is substantially higher than the 1.5 percent annual growth rate experienced in 1973 to 1981 and also higher than the postwar average of 2.7 percent from 1948 to 1973.

Despite this trend, early signs suggest that Mike Dukakis would take several steps which would increase the cost of labor and reduce America's competitive edge abroad.

To see the costs that will be imposed on American business during a Dukakis administration, one can simply take a look at the "Minimum Health Benefits for All Workers Act," sponsored by Senate Labor Committee Chairman Edward Kennedy.

The bill is not likely to pass this year but has been supported by Democratic nominee Mike Dukakis as a "blueprint" for the Dukakis health care policy.

The legislation erects a series of burdens on employers to provide health care insurance for workers and their families who work as little as 18 hours per week. Employers would also be prohibited from excluding any worker because of a prior disease or condition, including AIDS.

These mandatory health benefits would kick-in after the worker has paid no more than $250 of health-care expenses and would pay at least 80 percent of premiums for worker and family coverage. One hundred percent of the insurance premium would be paid for certain "low-wage" employees. That is a better deal than most Americans get from Blue Cross/Blue Shield today.

Cost estimates have varied widely on this measure. Advocates of the Kennedy bill argue it would cost only about $1,200 a year per worker or about $25 billion a year. Opponents suggest otherwise.

The Institute for Research on the Economics of Taxation suggests the bill would end up costing upwards of $5,000 per year per worker, or $100 billion in 1989 alone.

When government mandates higher labor costs, someone has to pay for them. In final analysis, new costs would be borne by:

(1) American consumers paying more at the cash register.
(2) American workers paying through reduced wages.
(3) Americans suffering from higher unemployment figures; and
(4) American taxpayers paying through increased taxes to fund benefits for those newly unemployed. Foreign consumers would pay little, as they would simply take their business elsewhere.

Many may argue that the minimum $1,200 per year per employee in costs associated with this bill is reasonable considering the destructive effects of an impoverished population base of health insurance.

Fine — but what about the countless other burdens that Congress has found necessary to thrust upon American business which fly in the face of "competitiveness?"

The minimum wage bill, again pushed by Kennedy and endorsed by Dukakis, is another oft-touted call for worker protection that only seems to make headlines during an election year.

Billed as a "compassionate" measure, an increased minimum wage would provide only a few post-inflation dollars in the pockets of a handful of poor while resulting in nearly one-half million workers losing their jobs.

Indeed, the increase in unemployment would be among low-wage workers, the group that the minimum-wage law is supposed to help.

Since 1980, while the minimum wage remained frozen, the proportion of workers receiving the minimum wage has fallen from about 11 to 4 percent. Two-thirds of these jobs are held by young, single workers, and 70 percent come from families with incomes at least 50 percent above the poverty line, according to a recent report by the Congressional Budget Office.

Perhaps Kennedy and Mike Dukakis should be forced to handpick those individuals who will lose their jobs because of this so-called "compassionate" measure. Increasing the minimum wage is foolish social policy, even if it seems the fair thing to do.

Other measures, from mandatory affirmative action to increased taxes for corporations to government-imposed employee benefits, have caused an aggregate decline in the nation's competitiveness.

When will the Democratic Party learn that there is a direct correlation between the number of regulations and requirements imposed on American businesses and the general level of unemployment? In June, America saw the lowest unemployment figures in 14 years. We should not allow this trend to reverse and unemployment to rise.

Neither Dukakis nor the Democrats in Washington can have it both ways. Either they should seriously support the competitive position of the nation's job-producing industries and get the heck out of managing private business, or they should nationalize all of America and get the economic Dunkirk over with now. Now is not the time for political opportunism.

Cutbacks starving schools for funds

To the editor:

Some of the opponents of improved educational funding in Illinois are using the outdated excuse that the massive declines in state educational funding are due to declining enrollment.

The declining enrollment argument is a late 1970s argument that is out of date. Enrollments all over Illinois are stable and in some districts increasing.

In 1984-85, for instance, statewide elementary and secondary enrollment was 1,833,316. By the 1987-88 school year, enrollment was essentially stable at 1,811,446.

A look at the number of students in the classroom in the kindergarten, first and second grades will show how dramatically enrollment in the lower grades is changing.

Excuse-making by those who have failed to adequately fund education in our state won't get us out of our current problems.

Neither will requiring over 200 mandates in the education reform act of 1985 and then failing to fund the very reforms that were put in place.

Roland Burris, state comptroller, should be commended for kicking off his campaign for governor in 1990 by pointing out that in 1978 the State Board of Education received 28.2 cents of every general fund dollar, while in 1989 the current governor's budget recommends only 22.6 cents of every general fund dollar.

Such a massive shift in state funding throws an inordinate burden on the local property taxpayers and starves the schools for funds.

Our state government is funding less than 40 percent of the total cost of education in Illinois. In 1975, it was funding 48 percent.

Now we rank 43rd out of the 50 states in the extent of state support for education.

Those who see the need for improvements to take our schools into the 21st century should look further at the Burris study, reports of the State Board of Education, the comments of U.S. Secretary of Education Bennett, and the views of our local school boards and superintendents.

We all need to consider what it is going to take to bring our schools up to the level not just above the other states, but of other nations that we are competing with economically.

Our children only go to school in Illinois for 175 days while other nations are exceeding 200 days a year.

Our summer schools now in session admit only a few remedial and a very few gifted students and provide no summer program at all for the vast majority of our students.

Our small early-childhood education program, which can make a significant difference for that 24 percent of students who are not even graduating from high school in Illinois, applies a proven program to only a small fraction of those that we know by experience will fail without it.

Our low pay for teachers provides no strong incentive for new people to enter the profession and is unfair to hard-working teachers.

All these unmet needs cry out for reform funded with money. We are cheating the next generations if we don't do that.

One of the ways to achieve a better educational system is to vote for the 1990 Illinois Constitutional Convention so that an educational funding and mandate requirement can express the fundamental consensus.

That we need to fund education consistently no matter what group of shortsighted politicians is serving at any particular time in Springfield.

Rise up, Granite City

Rise up, Granite City. Do not let a handful of individuals driven by unreasonable fear continue to dictate this community's image to the world.

The vocal minority has captured regional, national and worldwide attention by protesting that a Granite City school provides an education for a lonely child — a thin, bright-eyed boy of 7 who is cursed by a medical misstep to suffer for the rest of his life from the AIDS virus.

Rise up, Granite City. These people who would deny Jason the right to attend school with other children do so because they fear him, a fear not founded in fact but wholly on the hopelessly fractured logic of "what if."

With their minds closed to expert opinion concerning AIDS, the protesters stood May 5 outside of Prather Elementary School and made Jason and his mother suffer the humiliation of being told they were not wanted. In so doing, the protesters attracted the worldwide media spotlight to themselves and thereby darkened our city's image.

But even that could not satisfy some — the cowardly ones who continuously call the children and threaten them as cruelly as they threaten the adults.

Rise up, Granite City.

Do not allow the Robertson children, children born and raised in our town, to be bullied. Do not ignore that their mother is threatened and was struck with a club Saturday by a stranger who resents her child being in school.

We must stand up, be fed up, and vigorously decry these incidents, for if we do less, we give our blessings to evil and become participants thereof.

That is not our character, Granite City. Always, through desperate economic times, through disaster, whenever the need has arisen we have joined together and aided the underdog in Granite City, and now the Robertsons need our help. They need to know the content of our city's character.

Show them. Write to them. Support them, Granite City.

Tell them you will support them when school starts Aug. 25, that you will walk with them down the block-long stretch to Prather Elementary School on that first day.

Don't tolerate mob rule as the rule this city lives by.

Rise up, Granite City. Rise up.

Double take: House race finishes in race to House

Jerry Costello won Tuesday, but it wasn't the kind of impressive, Mel Price-style, stomp-em-hard victory Democrats used to see in the 21st Congressional District.

Though outperforming Republican rival Bob Gaffner by almost 3-1, Costello won by less than 4 percent of the vote. Costello paid out an estimated $800,000 to garner about 33,000 votes — that's $24 per vote.

Considering what he spent and the district's history of Democratic voting, Costello still would have lost without the take-it-for-granted bloc vote in East St. Louis. With all that city's problems, and considering Democrats have for decades run St. Clair County, it's amazing more East St. Louisans don't try the Republicans as an alternative to the machine.

Why Costello didn't win this district by a greater margin is debate fodder, at least until the pundits do a formal analysis. But factors to be mulled over in the meantime are that Costello's image was trashed as much as anything that came out of Ollie North's shredder, huge campaign contributions to "Costello Rockefeller" demonstrate he is not the traditional working-class hero type Democrats once loved, and his reliance on campaign aides to answer questions makes him appear aloof compared to the very approachable Price.

Costello won Tuesday, but he will require plenty of help from House Speaker Jim Wright and other Democrats on the Hill to make inroads "proving" Costello's political savvy. If something less happens, on Nov. 8 Costello could become this district's shortest-termed congressman.

Route 413 needs a gimmick

As an old song says, "You've got to have a gimmick."

Illinois House Majority Leader Jim McPike, D-Alton, may have a good idea on expediting construction of Federal Aid Project 413, the highway planned to link Interstate 270 near this community to the Alton-Godfrey area.

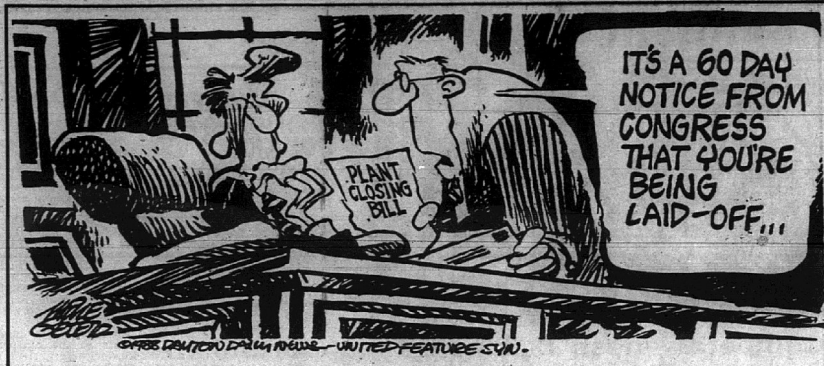

McPike proposes to seek Interstate designation for 413. This might sound a bit far-fetched except for the fact that U.S. 40 in St. Louis and St. Louis County has been proclaimed as part of Interstate 64, even though 40 at present falls far short of the national design and safety standards; 413 fully complies.

Interstate status is far more than symbolic. It permits federal/state financial participation on a 90-10 basis rather than a 70-30 ratio, a difference of many millions of dollars.

On either basis, the Illinois Department of Transportation views 413 as deserving of high priority, since it would extend the I-255-270 highway circle around the bi-state metropolitan area north to the only omitted population center in either St. Louis County or Metro East, Alton's metropolis (as chamber of commerce leaders like to call it).

We tend to agree with the elected officials and highway engineers who regard the extension as desirable. Unfortunately, neither the state nor federal road fund is adequate to undertake the task at this time. Maybe a device like the Interstate designation may offer the best hope for early action.

Tax, school, scandal cited

To the editor:

The recent fumbling and bumbling of the Illinois General Assembly on important issues which have significant public support underlines the need to establish the power of recall in Illinois.

Why should Illinois voters tolerate continued political gridlock on such fundamental problems as poor schools, unfair property taxes, and uninterrupted political scandals?

Recall is the process which allows voters to remove an incompetent or unethical elected official from office before his term is up.

Twenty-eight states, including Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Missouri, currently have some form of recall available to their citizens. But unfortunately the Illinois Constitution does not provide for recall.

Illinois voters ought to be able to recall and fire elected officials who consistently ignore crucial issues like ethics, tax and utility reform, and protecting citizens from the hazards of toxic waste.

The recall power in our state would allow voters to hold state and local elected officials accountable throughout their terms, not just on election day.

The power of recall is particularly needed now in Illinois. Recent statistics of the U.S. Department of Justice show that our state has had more public officials convicted of felonies in the past decade than any other Midwestern state.

An Illinois recall amendment would give voters the direct power to remove elected officials who ignore integrity in office and put their own selfish interests ahead of the public interest.

A constitutional amendment to establish recall in Illinois is possible through a state constitutional convention. This Nov. 8, Illinois voters will vote on an important referendum on whether to call a state constitutional convention.

Anyone who wishes more information on recall power or the constitutional convention referendum should contact me at Box 428, Oak Park, Ill. 60303 or call (312) 524-1979.

Wants to see disputed Jesus film

To the editor:

I recently read a very disturbing article in a newspaper concerning the decision of a Madison County movie theater to not show the movie called The Last Temptation of Christ.

Apparently some churches are carrying out a very well-orchestrated scare campaign aimed at the owners of the theaters, having people sign petitions and call the theaters objecting to the showing of the movie.

From the contents of the article, these people have apparently been successful in their effort, and now none of us will have the opportunity to make our own decision as to whether we wish to learn the true content of this controversial movie script.

Several points must be made here. One interesting aspect is that an amazing majority of those who protested have not seen the movie and have only been told of its content.

I also have not seen the movie. I understand the objectionable scenes involves Christ speculating in his last moments what his life would have been like had he chosen a different path. He imagines himself in a relationship with a woman and a family. He loves the woman and has sexual feelings for her.

Mind you, this is something he merely imagines, who on the cross? I also have not seen this with my own eyes and have been told of the content, so I am not sure of the accuracy until I can see for myself.

It is very important to me to have the opportunity to make my own decisions about what I see, read, and think. Is this important to anyone else out there? It is time to let it be known.

Another interesting point that needs to be made is that these same people who are so horrified by the idea that Christ could actually love and care for a woman, silently sit by while countless numbers of movies parade into the theaters and into our children's minds which show young women being victimized, raped, decapitated, cut up with chain saws and sexually violated in every conceivable way.

Why aren't these movies being protested by these concerned churches? Where are these protesters when we really need them? I personally would much rather see Christ in a loving relationship with a woman than see one cut into sections with a chainsaw.

I must seriously question a value system which is appalled by the former circumstance and blindly apathetic to the latter.

The time has come for the sane majority to come forward and protect their valuable freedom to think for themselves, to see for themselves, and to decide for themselves.

Let's protest movies we object to by not buying tickets, thereby giving others the right to make their own choices. We of the sane majority are becoming very lazy and take our freedoms for granted.

Please don't let a small group of fearful people decide which ideas you can be exposed to. History teaches us that can be disastrous.

If you are a concerned citizen with the ability to decide for yourself, I suggest you write letters, call movie theaters, start petitions, and let it be known that you have the intelligence to make your own choices and that you value the freedom to do so.

Watch how you're using that name

Several days back I got a polite note, the kind news people hate getting because it proves they're fallible.

I made an error in the July 6 edition of the paper. In a cutline under a photograph of a bug that we hoped someone might identify for a reader (and the staff, too), I wrote that the insect was in "a small styrofoam bowl."

Oh, no, it wasn't in a styrofoam bowl, The Dow Chemical Co. people informed me.

They sent along a little packet of information about Styrofoam, with a capital "S."

Included in the packet is a photo of a cup of coffee with the following caption and explanation: "You Can't Drink Coffee From A STYROFOAM Cup. There's No Such Thing. We know. Because we make STYROFOAM brand plastic foam. But we don't make it into cups, plates, coolers, egg cartons or fast food packages."

At the root of the company's concern is that if newspapers like ours perpetuate the misnomer, Styrofoam, when what we mean is plastic foam, then Dow could lose its Styrofoam trademark.

Dow isn't the only company trademark I've unwittingly infringed on during my career. While working as a reporter for Rube Yelvington in Mascoutah, I wrote an article about a politician who needed a Seeing Eye Dog. I meant Seeing Eye Dog as a generic term, but what I should have written was "guide dog," some unhappy Seeing Eye Dog folks informed me.

I take some small comfort in knowing I'm not the only person upsetting trademark holders. In the Midwest, where we're brand-name oriented, many of us ask for a Kleenex when we want a facial tissue; a Band-Aid when we want an adhesive bandage; a Band-Aid for artificial grass; Mace (actually the name is Chemical Mace) for tear gas coming in that handy aerosol canister; Clorox for bleach.

You may be throwing a plastic disk for fun, but without the brand name it's not a Frisbee; and break it gently to the boss, but you can't Xerox something for him unless you have a Xerox photocopy machine.

Did Tuesday's election results surprise you?

St. Clair County Democrat Jerry Costello narrowly defeated Republican Bob Gaffner in Tuesday's election for the 21st Congressional seat. Did such a strong showing by a Republican in the traditionally predominant Democratic district surprise you?

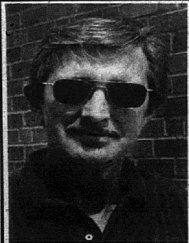

Barbara Joyce,
Granite City

"It was kind of a surprise I think Costello himself, made the difference. I think Gaffner will win in November."

Marvin Kessler,
Granite City

"It was closer than I thought it would be. Looks like it's going to be a close race in November; we'll have to wait and see."

Clyde Miller,
Granite City

"I figured (Gaffner) would do real well. I think the Republicans' platform is a little bit better than the liberal Democrats. I think it's a problem the Democrats have overall."

Bernie has resided in Granite City since 1963 and is a former manager of Nestle Foods Corp., St. Louis. He joined Nestle in 1952 and worked there until his retirement in 1986. Maxfield is a former member of the board of directors of the Community Chamber of Commerce, St. Louis, and is a past president and present member of the board of directors of the Industry Advisory Group of St. Louis. Bernie earned his real estate license in June. Crews Realty is the exclusive representative of the Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service in the Granite City area.

TRRA promotes 4; 2 retire

GRANITE CITY — Six promotions and retirements were announced Aug. 4 by President B.C. Davidson, Terminal Railroad Association, 2016 Madison Ave.

W. Dennis Spencer, assistant controller-accounting of Union Pacific Railroad from 1981 to 1987, was elected acting vice president, controller and treasurer. He will become vice president Sept. 1, replacing Kenneth L. Kelley, who will be retiring after 38 years with the company.

Ronald W. Phelps was appointed director of accounting and assistant treasurer. Bernard L. Gibbs director of data processing and Charles D. Thomas manager of data processing.

Thomas S. Alsop, assistant treasurer, retired after 46 years with the railroad.

Spencer joined Price Waterhouse in St. Louis in 1983 following graduation from Southern Illinois University. He joined Missouri Pacific Railroad as a senior internal auditor in 1967 and was director of auditing when it merged with Union Pacific.

Kelley joined the Terminal Railroad Association in 1950 as an accountant. He has been vice president, controller and treasurer since 1975. He is a graduate of Washington University.

Phelps joined the TRRA in 1981 and served in various clerical positions prior to joining the computer department in 1973. He served there as traveling auditor, chief freight auditor and office manager.

Gibbs worked as a computer operator with Hunter Packing Co. and a computer analyst with St. Louis County prior to joining the TRRA as a programmer in 1969. He later served as assistant manager and manager of data processing.

Thomas joined the association as a computer programmer in 1969 and was later systems analyst and, most recently, manager of data processing.

Alsop worked for Dun & Bradstreet before joining the Terminal Railroad Association in 1942. He worked in the auditor and controller departments and was chief accountant and office manager prior to being named assistant treasurer in 1980. He is a graduate of Southern Illinois University.

Magna Inc. announces earnings up

Magna Group Inc. Chairman William S. Badgley has announced second-quarter earnings of $3.9 million, up 6.2 percent over the same quarter last year. Earnings per share increased to 37 cents from 36 cents a year ago.

On a year-to-date basis, Magna's earnings totalled $8.7 million, an increase of 9.3 percent over 1987 earnings of $7.9 million. Earnings per share for the first six months of 1988 were 84 cents compared to 79 cents for 1987.

As Magna's net interest margin continues to be squeezed, management seeks ways to control non-interest expenses through consolidations.

"During the first six months of this year, we have consolidated six banks into other affiliates and have developed operations for item processing for the affiliates within the Belle ville area," Badgley said.

"In an effort to set Magna apart from the competition, we have introduced a guaranteed service program and will continue emphasizing quality service throughout 1988."

The allowance for loan losses was $12.8 million, an increase of $200,000 from June 30, 1987.

At June 30, 1988, the allowance for loan losses of $12.8 million was 96 percent of total loans, net of unearned income, compared to $11.9 million or 1.04 percent of loans outstanding at Dec. 31, 1987.

Total assets as of June 30, 1988, were $1.98 billion, a 13 percent increase from $1.75 billion a year earlier.

Total deposits increased 12.8 percent to $1.75 billion from $1.55 billion a year earlier.

Loans net of unearned income were $1.21 billion, up 12 percent from $1.08 billion at June 30, 1987. Stockholders' equity rose 9.8 percent to $143 million from $131 million a year earlier.

Popeye's Cajun Crawfish now available nationally

Cajun Crawfish, on the menu at Popeye's Famous Fried Chicken and Biscuits restaurant in Granite City, is being introduced nationwide.

"It came out as a test market item and we were one of the markets," said Don Bricker, owner of the Granite City franchise.

The franchise organization that introduced spicy Cajun-style chicken launched the product nationwide July 1, marking the first time crawfish have been offered by a major restaurant franchise.

Most of the 700 restaurants are serving the new Cajun Crawfish Platter, which consists of breaded fried crawfish, a salad, a biscuit and french fries.

Grown in the bayous and wetlands of Louisiana, the small, hard-shelled crustaceans have long been a regional favorite.

Crawfish look like small versions of their salt-water cousin, the lobster. People who have eaten both usually say that the crawfish has a finer taste and texture and the flavor is more intense. Bricker said; other crustacean connoisseurs say crawfish taste similar to shrimp, only better.

Granite City BPW meeting planned; 'Today's Women — Self-Image' topic

GRANITE CITY — The Granite City Business and Professional Women will hold a membership meeting at 6:30 p.m. Aug. 17 at Charlie's Restaurant.

A silent auction will be held to benefit the Foundation Fund. The fund is used for furthering the education of working women and assists in accomplishing one of the BPW goals: Women helping women.

At 6 p.m. Marcia Wooden, Busy Bee Salon, will present a demonstration of nail sculpture.

Sharon McBrien, a prevention specialist with Piassa Health Care, will present the program for the evening. Her topic will be "Today's Women — Self-Image."

McBrien has worked at Piassa, a drug and alcohol treatment and prevention agency, for more than two years. She specializes in working with Madison County schools in the area of program and case management. She wrote and implemented two high-risk drug prevention programs for children — "Special Kids" and "Adapted McGruff."

She is currently working on her master's degree in counseling education at Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, and anticipates completing it in June 1989.

Persons interested in attending the meeting may contact Dolores Stalecker, 452-0095, Elizabeth Briggs, 931-2940, or Becky Slater, 452-5391, before Aug. 14.

About real estate

By Don Campbell

Home improvements can cut taxable gain

Dear Mr. Campbell:

Is there a book, pamphlet or other source that details what improvements can be added to the original cost of a house to determine the amount of profit when the house is sold? I want to sell my house later this year. Over the last four or five years I have completely remodeled the kitchen and bathroom, improved the other rooms, added a sun room and another large room, have enclosed the property with a chain-link fence, added a storage barn, had a deck built, enclosed an area with a privacy fence, enlarged and paved a gravel driveway and added a wooden sidewalk.

S.D. Answer: It is an interesting collection of capital improvements that you have made there and I can't think of a one of them that the Internal Revenue Service would challenge as not being a capital improvement.

How much you will be able to hike your asking price as a consequence of your industriousness, however, is pretty much of an unknown, for the simple reason that we have no idea of what value your buyer-to-be will put on these new features.

You certainly are on solid ground, though, in adding the two new rooms and completely remodeling the kitchen and bathroom. The chain-link fence, the sidewalk and the minibarn are a little more iffy.

The only book I know of that really addresses the question is a relatively new one by real estate developer and appraiser Wallace Kaufman, called "Finding Hidden Values in Your Home," which is published in paperback by Macmillan and in paperback by Collier. Among other things, Kaufman guides you through the technique of running an appraisal on your own home, before and after you have added improvements.

Kaufman raises some other interesting points: why refinishing wooden floors can add more value than laying expensive carpeting; why trees can account for as much as 15 percent of a home's value; and why a finished basement will normally appraise for twice as much as an unfinished basement.

You might find it useful in estimating just how much you have boosted your gain.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

What is the convention on who receives the interest paid on the earnest money held by real estate brokers? Eight percent or 9 percent on $5,000 to $15,000 over three months is a few months' groceries.

B.C. Answer: I hate to dash your suspicions that the real estate broker is paying off his daughter's orthodontic bill with the interest on his escrow account, but the general practice is that such accounts are non-interest bearing. Think of the administrative headache: One $500 deposit lingers there for three months, another $5,000 in and out in five days. Who gets what share of any interest?

Four Sanford Brown grads begin careers with area companies

The Career Development Services Department at Sanford Brown Business College has announced four of its graduates have found jobs with area companies:

Becky Brantley, steel company secretary/receptionist,

Vicky Colp, accounting clerk with Edison Pipe Inc.,

Shannon Hendrix, with A.G. Edwards,

Sandra Talbue, admissions secretary with ITT Tech.

Consumer tips

Energy efficiency used in determining appliance value

By Nell F. Hartigan
Illinois attorney general

Q. We've been shopping around for appliances and have noticed an energy efficiency rating. Is there really anything to that?

A. When buying a major appliance, consumers should consider operating costs as well as the purchase price. An appliance that has a higher energy efficiency rating may cost more initially, but may actually be less expensive to use over the course of its lifetime.

Federal legislation sets standards for the energy efficiency of all major appliances. The standards for washing machines, dryers and dishwashers should have been met by Jan. 1. The standards for all other appliances, including refrigerators, freezers and ovens, will be phased in over the next five years.

The major appliances will carry labels indicating the energy factor (EF) or energy efficiency rating (EER). This may help you choose the appliance that is the most energy efficient. But remember, the actual operating cost also depends on how the appliance is used — or misused. When comparison shopping, ask about the warranty and servicing for the appliance. Also find out if there are extra charges for installation or if additional wiring or plumbing is needed to install the appliance, it can be quite expensive.

As a measure of safety, look for seals indicating listing by Underwriters Laboratory (UL) if the appliance is electric or the American Gas Association (AGA) if it is gas.

Care for elderly

Q. I am a senior citizen and am thinking of moving into a continuing-care retirement community. Could you give me some suggestions of what to look for?

A. A continuing-care retirement center provides housing, food and medical care for its residents and, depending on the facility, may even offer housekeeping and laundry services. As an applicant, you must sign a contract and pay an entrance fee, ranging from $40,000 to $100,000, as well as monthly fees, which range from $600 to $1,200.

The entrance fee may be kept in escrow and a portion of it returned when the buyer dies or moves out.

This type of center may be the answer for an older citizen who needs extra medical attention and help in his daily activities. The monthly fees for a center are often much lower than the fees for a traditional nursing home.

However, if you're more active you may not enjoy the slower lifestyle and regimented schedule that may be part of living in a continuing-care retirement center.

When choosing a community, be sure to talk to staff members and residents and find out if the center is accredited by the American Association of Homes for the Aging.

Before signing a contract, have an attorney review it. The contract should detail all services, fees, and rights, including the condition of termination by either the community or the resident.

Goods not ordered

Q. As a small business we are concerned about receiving invoices for merchandise that we did not order. What can be done about this problem?

A. Businesses and business people are losing millions of dollars annually to promoters who send false bills for goods and services that either are not received or don't exist at all. The false billings often are on invoices for office supplies or services that were never ordered by the company and never supplied.

What these schemes have in common is that companies will receive a professionally printed invoice which appears to be a legitimate bill for goods and services purchased by the firm.

Promoters usually move quickly from place to place. They use a battery of telephones operated in typical "bottle room" fashion. They contract with mail-receiving firms to accept deliveries. They are picked up by runners at least weekly. Or, the mail service is directed to send the replies on to another address. They use a diversionary stratagem to disguise the location of the phony operations.

Double helping

AS OFFICIAL representative for the National Kidney Foundation of Eastern Missouri and Metro East, Chris Tamayo, Granite City, gives a presentation on organ donation to senior citizens at the Monsanto YMCA, St. Louis.

Tamayo, a recent graduate of Southern Illinois University at Edwardsville, worked the summer as an intern with the Kidney Foundation in a program sponsored by Citicorp. The Citicorp Summer Internship program sponsored 15 young men and women this year. Tamayo said her time was well spent because "I needed the chance to break in slowly." She majored in marketing and said she hasn't ruled out graduate school, but is still actively looking for a job. "This is my first presentation to adults," she said, "I gave one to a Boys' Club and they didn't want to know as much detail." Tamayo said working with the Kidney Foundation had given her valuable business connections as well as a "real job" on her resume. Jan Reinert, communications coordinator, National Kidney Foundation, said Tamayo had been a great addition to her staff and that she didn't mind training her only to have her leave. "Besides, Chris said that if she doesn't get a job right away, she'll volunteer for us," Reinert said. "It's helped me a lot as well — it gave me the opportunity to learn supervisory skills." Reinert said she didn't know if the Kidney Foundation would have an intern next summer, but said she had already put together her proposal for Citicorp.

Olin Corp. wins $9.9 million ammo contract

WASHINGTON — The Olin Corp. has won a $9.9 million Navy contract to produce 20-millimeter ammunition for Hornet and Tomcat jet fighters, the Pentagon has announced.

Although the new Olin Defense Systems Group in East Alton won the contract, the 20mm rounds will be manufactured at the company's plant in Marion, Ill., said an Olin spokesman who did not want to be identified.

The Navy, selecting the Olin subsidiary over three unnamed contractors, is asking the company to make 1.8 million rounds for delivery between July 1989 and May 1990, said Lt. Janet Mescus, a Navy spokeswoman.

Olin will provide rounds for several aircraft, including the F/A-18 Hornet strike fighter, the F-14 Tomcat fighter, the A-7 Corsair II light attack jet, and the A-10 Thunderbolt II ground attack aircraft.

Olin also obtained an $8.3 million contract option for the production of 1.7 million rounds of 20mm ammunition. However, that deal's production schedules and delivery dates are still under negotiation, according to the Olin source.

Olin has been a steady supplier of medium-caliber ammunition to the Pentagon.

Pentagon probe clears area companies (for now)

St. Louis defense contractors escaped untouched in late July when the Pentagon began suspending contracts in connection with a Justice Department corruption probe, but industry analysts are wondering how many contracts the Pentagon might suspend in addition to the nine already put on hold.

"If you're talking about 85 contracts, there's more to unfold," said George Pedrosky, a defense industry analyst with Duff & Phelps in Chicago.

Pedrosky, preparing an investors' report on McDonnell Douglas' business outlook, was uncertain about what to tell his readers about the prospect of suspensions since the Pentagon's criteria for suspending contracts are not clear.

Like a number of other analysts, Pedrosky said that one sizable St. Louis contract, for the Advanced Tactical Aircraft, has been linked to the Justice Department probe.

Earlier this year, the Navy awarded $4.33 billion to McDonnell Douglas and General Dynamics to build a prototype ATA. The project could have a significant impact on this area since the 450 ATAs the Navy is expected to order for the 1990s may be worth $35 billion.

McDonnell Douglas consultant Melvin Paisley, a key figure in the investigation, is thought to have made "efforts to steer (the ATA contract) toward McDonnell Douglas," according to a federal warrant to search McDonnell Douglas files June 14.

Whether or not this link puts ATA in the same league as the contracts suspended July 22 is still open to question.

Although no indictments have been handed and no charges have been filed, Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci announced July 1 his department would suspend nine contracts totaling $1.2 billion "tainted" by allegations of wrongdoing.

Carlucci also said his department would review four companies that used consultants suspected of buying secret information from a Navy employee.

Brian McCartan

McDonnell Douglas spokesman Robert O'Brien declined to comment on the suspensions, and General Dynamics spokesman Joe Southerland said his company has no way of knowing what the fallout might be.

"We cannot predict how this will affect GD at this time," he said.

The Defense Department is caught between providing a fair, competitive bidding system and keeping procurement costs reasonable, noted Anthony Ginsberg, an investments analyst with Fourteen Research in New York.

Although many fear that curtailing or canceling major programs could run up costs, others worry about the appearance of rewarding contractors that use improper or illegal practices.

"It seems like the government isn't sure about how these contracts are going to be handled," Ginsberg said.

Brian McCartan, a researcher with the independent, non-profit Center for Defense Information in Washington, called ATA a "big player" that "might be under pressure." But he agreed that the Defense Department has failed to enforce tough action against large contractors in the past.

He cited the example of General Dynamics in 1985-86. While Congress and DoD attacked the company for trying to disguise cost overruns on submarines and for charging the government for entertainment costs during those years, the company logged $8 billion in growth for military sales and increased profits for the 14th straight year.

McCartan noted that the contracts Carlucci suspended are relatively small compared to the tens of billions of dollars involved in ATA and other big programs like the Navy's V-22 Osprey aircraft and Aegis destroyer.

Of the large contractors who won these contracts, McCartan predicted, "They'll be slapped, but they won't be suspended."

Pedrosky said prices for defense contractors' stock have been flat in recent months following projections that the federal defense budget will continue to shrink. He added that they had not fluctuated in response to the probe, saying, "more bad news just didn't have any affect."

Pedrosky said it would be imprudent for the Defense Department to begin suspending all contracts connected to the Justice Department probe. But he added, "With no indictments expected until the end of the year, there are a lot of contracts up in the air."

Shoney's shareholders OK recapitalization plan

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Shoney's Inc. shareholders have approved a recapitalization plan that provides for a special $20 per share dividend.

At the shareholders' meeting held in Nashville's First American Center on June 23, 88 percent of the shares represented in person or by proxy were voted in favor of the $730 million recapitalization. Eighty-five percent of the shareholders voted.

Under the plan, the company will pay shareholders of record as of July 5 a special dividend of $16 cash and $4 in principal amount of subordinated debentures bearing a 12 percent annual interest rate.

The payment date set was July 25, conditioned on finalizing documentation for the bank financing necessary to pay the cash portion of the dividend, and qualification of the debenture instruments by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

"This plan allows shareholders to realize an immediate and significant portion of the value of their shares," said J. Mitchell Boyd, Shoney's vice chairman and chief executive officer.

"We see this action as an important step in our transition from a growth company to a mature company in the highly competitive restaurant industry."

Under an amendment to the company's charter approved by shareholders, the company will increase its authorized capital stock from 50 million to 100 million shares.

Shareholders approved an amendment to limit certain liabilities of directors. The recapitalization plan also provided for adjustment to company employee benefit plans and grants.

Illinois, other states salute river, river road, tourism

An Illinois delegation left Aug. 7 for St. Louis to join the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the Mississippi River Parkway Commission and its successful backing of the Great River Road.

The 10-state commission met Aug. 7-9 in St. Louis. The Illinois delegation included Sen. Sam M. Vadalabene, D-Edwardsville, chairman, and the following members of the Mississippi River Parkway Advisory Council: George Arnold, Thomas Mracek, Kenneth E. Stobaugh, Allan Abbott, Joan O'Neill, Robert Thornberry, Michael Devine, Richard Kahne, Mrs. Marvin Montgomery and Robert Sakas.

In the spirit of the event, the delegation arrived at a special Sunday afternoon riverfront event Aug. 7 via the Senator Sam towboat and an old-fashioned trolley car.

The Mississippi River Parkway Commission, charged in 1938 with preserving the Mississippi Corridor, has directed the spending of $714 million and devoted 50 years to building a roadway along the river and preserving and promoting its historic and scenic aspects.

The result is the Great River Road, which follows the entire 2,552-mile length of the Mississippi River from its Minnesota headwaters and beyond into Ontario, to its vast Louisiana delta.

The 50th anniversary celebration was marked by a series of riverfront activities and the three-day conference.

On Sunday, delegations from all of the commission states plus a group from the Canadian commission member, Ontario, arrived in St. Louis, each by way of a unique means of transportation. Included were a bush plane, a riverboat, Tennessee walking horses, antique cars, canoes, bicycles, a trolley and the towboat named after Vadalabene.

The celebration launched a major promotion of the Mississippi River country to the international tourist market.

Illinois and nine other states plus Ontario have joined together to commit funding and support for the effort, which will take the form of advertising, public relations activities, a trade show and consumer fairs in several foreign countries, including Japan, Germany and Great Britain.

"This is an expanded tourism effort that would be impossible for each state to undertake on its own," Sen. Vadalabene said.

Chairman of the Illinois Council and co-pilot of District III, which comprises the states of Missouri, Kentucky and Illinois, he said, "With this celebration, we are officially kicking off the marketing program."

The Great River Road, Illinois 3 in this area, has been designed to enhance areas of scenic, historic, archaeological and recreational significance to the Mississippi River.

Mozies spent by federal, state and local governments have gone for road improvements, scenic and historic preservation, trails, and tourist information facilities.

State news

Drug program aimed at jailed abusers

The Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority has awarded the Illinois Department of Corrections $187,500 in federal funds to establish a statewide drug education program for substance abusing offenders in adult and juvenile institutions, including an intensive treatment program for prisoners at the Dwight Correctional Center, the state's all-female prison.

The federal money will be used, along with $62,500 in matching state funds, to carry out a three-fold program of offender education statewide, an intensive treatment program at Dwight and a community reintegration, including community treatment programs for released offenders.

According to the IDOC, more than 50 percent of the adult offender population has reported some level of substance abuse.

"A growing body of research shows there is a link between substance abuse and criminal behavior," said J. David Coldren, the authority's executive director.

"Our correctional facilities are a logical place for the criminal justice system to try to break the cycle of drugs and crime," he said.

No new services to treat IV users

The state will offer no increased treatment programs for IV drug users despite the spread of AIDS through drug abuse, said William T. Atkins, director of the Illinois Department of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse.

Atkins said his department's budget will not allow expanded services for its increasing clients. "An additional 3,100 IV drug users were to be treated to cut down on the spread of AIDS; those drug users will not be served with this budget,"

In June, the department had announced its plans to begin providing treatment for IV drug users, but the $5.5 million proposal did not pass the Legislature. About 500 IV drug users are now on a waiting list for treatment.

Rare fungal disease linked to planting

Twenty-five cases of a rare fungal disease have been reported in the state this summer, said Dr. Bernard J. Turner, director, Illinois Department of Public Health.

The disease — sporotrichosis — is caused by direct contact with a fungus commonly found in sphagnum moss, which is used in transporting and transplanting trees, especially pine-tree seedlings.

Fewer than a half-dozen cases are normally reported each year in the state. The disease is characterized by swollen lymph glands and large, pus-filled ulcers, usually on the hands and arms.

The Illinois cases have been reported in three counties — Champaign, Kankakee and Kane. Fifteen of the 23 people took part in Arbor Day tree-planting activities last April. Turner advises those who transplant, or have contact with, trees packed in sphagnum moss protect their hands and arms by wearing thick gloves and long-sleeved garments.

State stepping up Fair Housing Act

The Illinois Department of Human Rights is spearheading a drive intended to expedite enforcement of housing discrimination laws and its intake of housing discrimination charges in central and southern Illinois.

The program, jointly sponsored by the NAACP and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, will concentrate enforcement in Peoria and Carbondale. The stepped-up housing discrimination crackdown coincides with the 20th anniversary of the federal Fair Housing Act.

Half of requests for landfills approved

According to a new publication, "Regional Pollution Control Facility Siting in Illinois," about 50 percent of the developers of regional pollution control facilities receive both local and state permission to build. The facilities include landfills, incinerators, storage and treatment plants.

Bernard P. Killian, director of the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency, said the location of landfills continues to be a sensitive environmental issue among local officials, residents and members of the General Assembly. The study confirms that it is easier to expand an existing landfill than it is to obtain the necessary approvals for construction of a new facility. "Nearly one-third of all siting decisions have been appealed to the Pollution Board," Killian said.

New trustee named to university board

Gov. Jim Thompson has named Paul Cicero, Rockford, as a trustee of the University of Illinois, replacing Dr. Ann E. Smith, who resigned last month to become a candidate for associate chancellor at the University of Illinois at Chicago campus.

Cicero, a lawyer, will serve through the November election. He will seek approval from the State Central Committee of the Republican Party to run on the November ballot and, if elected, would fill the remaining two years of Smith's term.

Conservation, safety highlight state fair

Visitors to the Illinois State Fair Aug. 11 through 21, will get an opportunity to visit an outdoor educational wonderland and to see how safe home can be.

The model house of a crime prevention expert. Conservation World, in the northwest corner of the fair grounds in Springfield, Ill., will feature a lumberjack show, "Kids for Conservation," amphitheater performers, an Indian presentation, magic show, craftsmen, field dog demonstrations and fisheries exhibits.

In an exhibit by the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority, McGuffey, the crime-fighting character of the National Crime Prevention Council, will demonstrate safety characteristics of a near-life-size house the Authority has created. Fairgoers will be able to see how proper door and window locks work, how outside and inside lighting enhance security, and how safer safety features such as peepholes and smoke alarms work.

Close congressional contest likely again for fall election

Battered by a barrage of campaign bumps and bruises, bloodied but unbowed, Gaffner promised not to produce any more purple prose like that, but you get the idea.

It was a tough fight, one likely to be repeated this fall.

THE PROCESS of electing a new congressman heaped abuse and condemnation on both the winner and the loser.

Democrat Jerry Costello defeated Republican Robert Gaffner by less than 2,000 votes out of a total of 64,000 in this week's special election.

Costello will serve until mid-January, when the Nov. 8 Gaffner-Costello victor will begin a full two-year term.

WHAT LED TO the closeness of the contest? Apparently the hard-hitting manner in which it ended, with both aspirants slugging it out to toe in the center of the ring.

Gaffner was relatively respectful of the beloved U.S. Rep. Melvin Price in the 1982-84-86 elections.

When the Republican came within 943 votes of defeating the 42-year congressman two years ago, the near-miss led to an outpouring of contributions for 1988.

THIS TREASURE TROVE enabled Gaffner to wage a spirited battle against the even-better-financed Costello.

Costello had to be considered the favorite. Democrats are much more numerous in Metro East, particularly in East St. Louis.

Gaffner's best hope for an upset was to go after his opponent in bare-knuckle fashion. To win, he had to try and tarnish Costello's image.

A HIGHLY EXPERIENCED official despite his relative youth, Costello needed to be pictured (from the viewpoint of Gaffner strategists) as an

Regional Roundup

By Bill Winter

all-powerful political boss.

From Costello's viewpoint, Gaffner needed to be put on the defensive, through attacks on Gaffner's ethics in his years as an alderman.

Issues might become less visible if brawling dominated the campaign, but that was a price both felt they had to pay.

Besides that, at a mid-summer debate in Collinsville, many in the audience reacted to the similarity of answers to questions by concluding "there isn't a dime's worth of difference" between the adversaries.

(Actually, there was somewhat of a Dukakis-Bush difference in their philosophies, judging by their answers to a wider range of questions in interviews conducted by Suburban Journals writers and editors.)

POLITE in their debating and public talks, the candidates changed and "went for the jugular" in the closing days, utilizing radio commercials, newspaper advertisements and direct mail.

In the last weekend of the campaign, the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee alleged Gaffner violated federal law by failing to report repayment of loans he had made to his campaign committee.

Speaking as "the only veteran in this race," Gaffner said he planned, on Aug. 8, to donate $888.88 to the Jefferson Barracks Veterans Hospital.

Costello denounced "campaign mailings sent to senior citizens by my opponent" and said Gaffner was trying to mislead voters about Social Security.

Costello promised to be "the strongest advocate of Social Security in Congress."

ON ELECTION EVE, Costello presented an open letter by Harold Price, aged brother of the late Cong. Price.

Endorsing Costello, Harold Price said, "This has been the dirtiest campaign for Congress in my memory. The Republicans have sent political whiz kids here from the East Coast to manipulate the voters and steal this Congressional seat."

Gaffner, meanwhile, said there are 20,000 fewer people in the work force than two years ago in St. Clair, where Costello is County Board chairman; said the St. Clair County Board and county agencies gave him special favors to businessmen who then gave campaign gifts; and again alleged that judicial selections were manipulated.

POLITICAL "LUGS" — enforced gifts to campaign treasurers by low-paid government employees — are not something from the distant past of Metro East political machines, Gaffner contended. He said they are still a fact of life in some St. Clair offices.

He quoted the Better Government Association's general counsel as saying pressured giving is an "insidious" way of taking taxpayers' money for political campaigns.

Both insisted they are "Mr. Nice Guy." They impressed those they met as being not only intelligent and resourceful but, also personable.

Each came across as well-educated and polished.

Each said he would be voters' friend, but neither predicted a lasting friendship with his ballot opponent.

Early start proposed for new congressman

P-R/J Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Arrangements were made immediately prior to Tuesday's special congressional election for earlier-than-scheduled swearing-in of the winner.

If the election outcome was decisive, it was decided, the victor probably could be sworn in before Congress went into its month-long summer recess late this week, House officials said.

St. Clair County Board Chairman Jerry Costello, the Democratic candidate, predicted he would win a landslide victory while Republican Robert Gaffner said on the election eve that he expected a tight race in their 21st District battle to succeed the late Democratic Rep. Mel Price.

Deputy House Clerk W. Raymond Colley said Tuesday that he had been in touch with the Illinois State Board of Elections and gained an agreement that if the results were lopsided, unofficial results would be forwarded to the House and that the individual would be sworn-in this week.

A close election, however, would mean that the winner would have to await official certification from the Illinois secretary of state and, because Congress would be out of session, could not be sworn-into-office until Sept. 8. That scenario would be in keeping with the tradition that new House members cannot be sworn in unless Congress is in session, Colley said.

Bea Swartz, assistant associate director of the state election board, said the state isn't planning to certify the special election results officially until Aug. 22, when Congress will be out of session.

Spokesmen from the Gaffner and Costello camps said Monday that the candidates had approved the plan to install a clear winner as soon as possible.

"If we can get sworn in Thursday, we will do it, just so we can get our office mobilized and our Congressional correspondence under control. We want to hit the road running," said Bill Atwood, Gaffner's campaign manager.

"The only advantage is added seniority and getting your feet on the ground," said Costello campaign manager Dave Wagner.

Mike Mansfield, who was the top administrative assistant during Price's last three years, has been running the Washington office under the guidance of the clerk of the U.S. House of Representatives since the congressman died April 22.

Mansfield had hoped to succeed the retiring Price, but lost the March 15 congressional primary to Costello.

Mansfield said Tuesday would be his last day on the job. He backed the idea of getting a new member sworn in as soon as possible.

"Every day helps," Mansfield said. "The sooner you get sworn in, you can get your office set up and get on the payroll."

In addition to vying for the unexpired term, Gaffner and Costello are on the Nov. 8 ballot as rivals for a full two-year congressional term starting in January.

Cassidy: Budget cuts devastated training but '89 should be better

By Shawn Candela

This has been an "awful year" for the U.S. Air Force, says Gen. Duane H. Cassidy, commander-in-chief of the Military Airlift Command, which is based at Scott Air Force Base, Belleville.

Cassidy delivered the keynote address Aug. 5 during an Air Force Association briefing session on "Training Tomorrow's Combat Air Force," held at the Adair's Mark Hotel in downtown St. Louis. Cassidy said he could not remember a more difficult year than 1988 for the Air Force.

"It has been unconscionably turbulent," he said. "And that turbulence could not possibly be understood by anyone who doesn't have to work with it every day."

Cassidy said this year's federal defense budget reduction drastically affected the ability of the Air Force to train its personnel.

But he said he is optimistic about the future of training, and the availability of funding for next year.

"We are currently on the cutting edge of new training developments, the like of which we've never seen before," he said.

Cassidy said that since 1982, problems with training have developed because of outdated equipment, poor facilities and old-fashioned methods.

"We are now in the process of contracting our training because we have found our methods are not as stable as they need to be," he said.

Cassidy said 1989 will be a better year.

"The funding profile for 1989 brings us back to '87 levels," he said. "We will be fully funded."

But he stopped short of saying it will be a great year.

"There is no bill to cut funds at the moment, but stand by, guys. It's not over yet," he said.

"I'll have the best Air Force have the best ever."

Get A Great Interest Rate Without Locking Up Your Money

When CDs and Money Market Accounts were paying in double figures, we didn't seem to mind that we couldn't get to our money. But with current interest rates, few of us want to see our money locked up.

The key to today's economy is a Share Savings Account from Granite City Steel Employee's Federal Credit Union. It pays an interest rate that's competitive with local CD and Money Market rates, but you can deposit and withdraw your money anytime you want without penalty.

The credit union's Share Savings Account earns a rate of 5.75% APR, compounded and paid monthly. That's an effective yield of 5.90%.

It's a great combination — competitive interest rates with passbook accessibility.

Illinoisans primed for their party's big party

By Judy Fahys
P-R/J Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Dennis Rickoff has just one concern about his party's national convention next week in New Orleans.

He worries that Republicans are so single-mindedly delighted with the country's political course that television viewers across the country will find the Republican National Convention boring.

"I don't think we're going to have issues to talk about the same as the Democrats," said Rickoff, an Albers resident and chairman of the Clinton County Board. "I hope we can get a controversy going so we can get some attention."

Rickoff will be trying to whip up some interest in GOP politics next week on the Superdome floor alongside the two other convention delegates — Godfrey attorney Tom Long and Carpenter attorney Don Weber, and three alternates from Illinois' 21st Congressional District.

In all, there will be 4,554 delegates to the Republican National Convention, eager to praise seven years of GOP leadership and the campaign for the party's certain nominee, Vice President George Bush. The Republican National Committee also expects up to 60,000 media and guests at the party's four-day convention in New Orleans.

The 22-member Illinois delegation will stay at the Meridian Hotel in the central business district of New Orleans, just a few minutes by cable car to the city's famed French Quarter.

Delegates will attend a daily breakfast and caucus at 8 a.m. in the hotel to discuss issues and form strategies.

Unlike Rickoff, Long said he's comfortable with the lack of tensions within the party, the media focus on the Democratic National Convention in Atlanta last month.

"I don't understand why people think there has to be controversy," said Long, who is chairman of the Madison County Republican Committee. "Conventions are planned for people to get together and to share ideas."

Foremost in Long's opinion is winning the November election. He said the convention will give delegates a chance to tout the Reagan record. "We were on a sinking ship like the Titanic when he took over eight years ago, and now it's an ocean liner like the Queen Elizabeth II," he said.

Talk about the Reagan legacy also is expected to dominate the conversation at the many receptions planned for convention week.

Local delegates can pay $50 to fete First Lady Nancy Reagan or the vice president's wife, Barbara Bush. For $55, they can join Alton columnist and conservative leader Phyllis Schlafly Monday afternoon in her salute at the New Orleans Museum of Art to former U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, departing Education Secretary William J. Bennett and rejected Supreme Court nominee Robert H. Bork.

The Illinois contingent plans to celebrate itself with a Sunday evening party. All in all, both Long and Rickoff reported about a dozen invitations apiece to various other receptions.

On the convention floor, the delegates have little to accomplish except finalizing the ticket and refining the national platform.

Rickoff said the national platform will probably include the party's renewed commitment to enacting the "Human Life Amendment," a constitutional ban on abortion. He also predicted that during this convention the party would not be as aggressive in pushing for prayer in public schools.

"The most exciting thing that will happen is the selection of a vice presidential nominee," Rickoff predicted.

The suspense on that matter is expected to last until the convention's final night, when Bush has said he will name his choice.

The list of possible picks includes Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, his wife and former secretary of transportation, Elizabeth Hanford Dole, New York Rep. Jack Kemp and Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson.

"There are so many good people he (Bush) could pick," said Long. "Your guess is as good as mine."

Although he called the Illinois governor "a tremendous campaigner and a great political personality," Long said he thought Bush would probably choose Dole over Thompson.

Rickoff agreed Thompson was not the likely choice, saying that the governor is not as popular as he used to be even in his home state. "I don't even know if he could deliver Illinois."

Rickoff, a Kemp supporter, said, "If we're going to have a Dole, I'd rather have Elizabeth."

Delegate Weber wants to 'set record straight'

By Judy Fahys
P-R/J Washington bureau

WASHINGTON — Republicans who gather for the party's national convention in New Orleans next week face the crucial task of scouring smudges on the GOP record left over from the Democratic convention.

Foremost in Long's opinion is winning the November election. He said the convention will give delegates a chance to tout the Reagan record. "We were on a sinking ship like the Titanic when he took over eight years ago, and now it's an ocean liner like the Queen Elizabeth

"After what the Democrats did in distorting the picture, I think that's a main purpose for the convention," said Weber in emphasizing the importance of correcting opposition allegations.

The GOP loyalist has attended the past three Republican conventions.

All in all, there will be 4,554 delegates and guests at the New Orleans convention, eager to tout the record of departing President Ronald Reagan and help Vice President George Bush move into the White House next year. The Republican National Committee also expects up to 60,000 media members and other guests.

The 22-member Illinois delegation includes three delegates and three alternates from the state's 21st Congressional District as well as similar groups from other districts.

"Our platform in 1980 and 1984 remains basically the same," said Weber, who led Reagan's floor fights against Bush and other Republicans at the 1976 convention in Kansas City.

"We're not going to put our platform in a white paper bag like a drunk puts his scotch bottle in a bag that's exactly what the Democrats are doing."

With election-time targets so clearly captured in the sights of the local delegates, some seemed worried about eruptions of internal conflict.

"The most exciting thing that will happen is the selection of a vice presidential nominee," Delegate Dennis Rickoff said.

Weber agreed, saying, "That's the drama Bush has left."

The suspense on that matter is expected to last until the convention's final night, when Bush has said he plans to announce his choice.

Weber discounted the possibility that his governor, James R. Thompson, now in his fourth term in the Illinois executive mansion, would be picked to run for vice president.

Citing Thompson's recent campaign for a state income tax increase, Weber said, "There's just no way that kind of guy is going to be nominated."

He said a party conservative such as Rep. Jack Kemp of New York or upstate Illinois Rep. Henry Hyde would make a better choice for Bush.

Personally? "I'm for Kemp," Weber said.

New prisons going up fast

Construction on Illinois' two newest prisons continues to progress well, particularly at the Mount Sterling facility where work is about two months ahead of schedule.

"The Mount Sterling prison is 50 percent complete," says Mia Jazo, Illinois Capital Development Board spokeswoman. The prison could be ready for its first inmates in late April or early May of 1989, she said.

It is unclear if the department will have the operating funds needed to open the facility because of unanswered questions about the Fiscal Year 1989 budget. Legislators appropriated less than Gov. James R. Thompson sought.

"It is a real possibility that we could have a new prison ready to go and no money to run it for the last two or three months at the end of FY 1989," said Deputy Director Karl Becker, Bureau of Administration and Planning.

At the Canton prison, engineers estimate the seven major structures of the facility will be roofed over and enclosed by Nov. 20.

THE LAW AND YOU

BY RICK REED
Attorney At Law

The California Supreme Court recently heard a case in which the parents of a deceased child sued a church for negligent pastoral counseling. This case was filed in 1979, and the parents charged in the complaint that the suicide of their 24-year-old son was a result of incompetent counseling. The parents claimed the boy was suicidal, and yet the pastors of the church referred him to church-affiliated counselors who were unable to treat his emotional problems.

Should a church be liable for negligent pastoral counseling? Churches around the nation are watching this case closely. Many of the nation's churches have filed "friend of the court" briefs with the California Supreme Court in support of the defendant church. The churches have argued that if California law imposes a duty of due care on those who undertake a counseling relationship, many church leaders will stop counseling emotionally troubled members.

The attorney for the parents argued that the church shouldn't get immunity in this case since its religious beliefs were not the issue. He further noted that the pastors knew the young man was suicidal and nevertheless referred him to incompetent church-affiliated psychologists.

The attorney also argued to the California Supreme Court that the church advertised in tapes and books that its counselors were competent to handle the most serious mental problems, including suicide and schizophrenia. In light of this, the plaintiffs felt that the church should have the same accountability as any other mental health professional. The California Supreme Court has not yet issued a decision in this case.

The attempt to hold pastors liable for negligent counseling is an area of the law that has not been established in many states at the present time. Pastors who undertake counseling duties should probably be aware of the potential liability in these situations. It is probably advisable for pastors to obtain liability insurance coverage until some of these issues are more clearly defined in each individual state.

Start Kentucky Vacation At History Farm

Land Between the Lakes (LBL) is a 170,000-acre national recreation area managed by the Tennessee Valley Authority (TVA). Camping, hiking, fishing, boating and other outdoor activities are enjoyed throughout the year. The LBL peninsula is bordered by two man-made lakes, Lake Barkley and Kentucky Lake. They were created by impounding the waters of the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers. Today, the two lakes offer 220,000 surface acres of water and more than 3,500 miles of shoreline.

In addition to water recreation, a popular visitor attraction is the Homestead-1850, a 19th-century living history farm. One of the largest buffalo herds east of the Great Plains roams a 200-acre pasture near the Homestead site. LBL is a good starting point for a self-guided regional tour, but it is just the beginning. A wide assortment of restaurants, resorts and private businesses are located along the shoreline and in communities outside LBL. ## Murray Gets Kudos

A Rand McNally publication, Retirement Places Rated, named the Murray-Kentucky Lake area the best retirement spot. The Murray-Kentucky Lake area is composed of Calloway and Marshall counties in western Kentucky. Statistics show that three out of every 20 senior citizens are new comers to the area. Murray's population is 14,248.

Historic preservation is practiced in Murray. Handsome 18th-century homes near downtown square have been restored and bed and breakfast inns. The 1907 Louisville & Nashville freight depot has been moved to a big park on Arcadia Street to join a restored 1823 log cabin courthouse.

The area also is home to industry, including the Briggs & Stratton engine company and Fisher Price toys. Soybean, corn and tobacco are grown in the country.

The Murray-Kentucky Lake area has low health care and housing costs, accredited hospitals, a good supply of physicians and medical specialists, an established public transit system and opportunities for continuing education at a nearby state university.

As in other college towns, the ebb and flow of community life is regulated by the academic calendar. Murray State University offers a rich variety of concerts, lectures, dramatic productions, art exhibits, and Ohio Valley Conference football and basketball games.

Murray is just a few miles from Kentucky Lake and Lake Barkley. The area has almost 3,500 miles of shoreline. Outdoor enthusiasts can fish, sail or swim in the lakes. This authentic, small college town on the edge of the largest man-made body of water in the United States is an enjoyable place to live or visit.

Cruise's female fans toasted in 'Cocktail'

By Harry Hamm
Staff affiliate

Men can stop reading this review right here, because "Cocktail," (2 1/2 stars) is a woman's picture, a colorful movie valentine with Tom Cruise on the cover.

It is not that "Cocktail" doesn't offer some realistic male roles. It's just that they don't really matter. What matters is Cruise, constantly smiling, constantly looking for love.

The days, what more do you need in a movie?

Cruise plays Brian Flanagan, an ambitious young resident of Queens just out of the Army. After pounding the pavements of New York City and being rejected in the business world for lack of a college degree, Cruise wanders into a trendy Manhattan food-and-booze emporium where he is given a shot at being a bartender by Bryan Brown.

Brown plays Doug Coughlin, a consummate cocktail con artist who juggles bottles while he tries to keep the ladies in the air at the same time. Coughlin's goal is to marry a wealthy young lass and retire as the owner of his own night club.

Cruise has slightly higher goals. He goes to school by day, so he can become a true capitalist, and tends bar at night, so he always can look back and appreciate the character-building qualities of poverty.

"Cocktail" features a love story (Cruise falls for a poor young artist, played by Elisabeth Shue) and romantic locales in Jamaica, where Cruise goes to tend bar among tourists and make some real money.

"Cocktail" is a movie full of heart-rending questions.

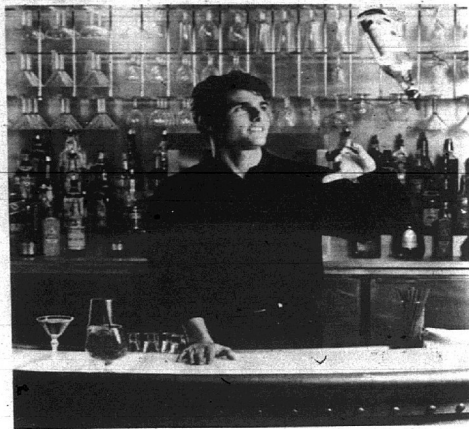

Will Cruise finally be able to graduate from college and open his own night spot? He wants to call it "Cocktails and Dreams," but "Hardstuff and Hangovers" might be more appropriate.

Is Shue capable of real love? If there are any men in the audience, how are they managing to stay awake?

All is revealed in "Cocktail."

It even has a happy ending.

Rated R (language and sexual content). Running time is 103 minutes.

TOM CRUISE plays Brian Flanagan, an ambitious young man who gets rejected from the business world and wanders into a trendy Manhattan food-and-booze emporium where he is given a shot at being a bartender.

John Auble joins KTVI as assignment editor

A familiar name of the past has returned to the St. Louis television news scene.

KTVI (Channel 2) has hired John Auble, formerly of KSDK-TV (Channel 5) and KMOX-TV (Channel 4), as the station's senior assignment editor.

Auble most recently was one of the owners of the Goldenrod Showboat. He attained critical success as co-host with Dick Ford of the Emmy award-winning "Newsbeat" program on Channel 5 that was canceled several years ago.

Plans do not include any air time for Auble.

In other airwave activities, Ron O'Brien has been hired as the new morning announcer at WKQB-FM (106.5). He previously worked in Denver and Chicago. He replaces the "Dawn Patrol" team of Rick Rumble and Steve Cochen who left the station for new jobs in Memphis, Tenn., and Minneapolis, respectively.

Michael Dixon is out as an "At Your Service" talk-show host at KMOX. He had been hosting his show from Phoenix, Ariz., where he works in radio and television. Sources at the station said KMOX will audition different hosts during the next few weeks to find a replacement.

Can you spare a dime? Daytime radio station WINU-AM (1510) in Highland, Ill., received approval last fall from the Federal Communications Commission to change their frequency to 880 AM, increase their power from 1,000 to 2,500 watts, and get a permit to broadcast day and night.

But it is an expensive proposition, costing at least $200,000, said Ron Jacober, a sportscaster at KMOX who also is one of the WINU owners.

"We have to buy new equipment like a transmitter, new towers and other things," Jacober said. "The most business ventures, you have to get a loan to make improvements."

"But we (former Post-Dispatch advertising executive Darwin Wiese and six limited partners) are tapped out. We put everything we had into buying the station and building it up. Getting a loan isn't easy.

What Jacober forgot to include was the initial cost of engineers and attorneys who processed their application to the FCC. WINU had to fight a competing application from James Magee of Lake St. Louis who tried to acquire the frequency for a Wentzville station.

Jacober hinted the WINU owners may solicit additional investors for the station.

On the subject of Metro East radio stations, when WRYT-AM (1000) in Edwardsville begin broadcasting day and night, the station went off the air in November with only a daytime license but made an application in December to the FCC for day and night approval.

Station owner Robert Howe said he is perplexed by the delay.

"We're still waiting from the FCC," he said. "I didn't expect it to take this long."

Anyone filing a competing objection with the FCC could delay the procedure but Howe said his consultants in Washington, D.C., reported no one had filed a objection in the 30-day time period allowed.

In the meantime, after it signs off the air at sunset, WRYT broadcasts at night on one of the Cencom cable television access channels.

Kevin Killeen, the WRYT's first news director, resigned recently and was replaced by reporter Nancy Potter. Killeen would not say why he made the decision to quit.

KDVS (88.1), which signed on the air late last year, is looking for a general manager.

Cloudy writing rains on 'Stormy Monday'

By Frank Hunter
Staff affiliate

There is a fair amount of mulling amid the menace and mayhem in (faded) director Mike Figgis' "Stormy Monday" (2 1/2 stars), filmed in the chrome-and-leather neon nightclub section of Newcastle in Tyne, England.

There is not much dialogue, and what there is is not especially bright. Figgis seems mainly interested in creating a dark, brooding romantic thriller to the accompaniment of falling rain and occasional jazz music rather than fleshing out the script with taut writing.

One of the film is B.B. King's rendition of the title song, written 40 years ago.

day's" shallow characters apart from Tommy Lee Jones as Cosmo, a greedy American businessman hellbent to carry modern commercial real estate development to Newcastle and make the English city his own.

Melanie Griffith plays Kate, an American actress whose career is withering badly while she slings hash in a diner and struggles to break out of a tormented love affair with the crooked American developer whose sneeringly superior manner with underlings borders on the psychotic.

Cosmo does not love Kate anymore but he does not want any one else to have her, a clichéd dramatic device that crumbles under the onslaught of mediocre dialogue during their tense encounters.

Sean Bean is Brendan, an unemployed jazz enthusiast given a job by nightclub owner Finney, played by Sting.

After having a couple of drinks at a nearby pub, Brendan and Kate decide they are in love despite the increasing wrath of Cosmo, who is trying to force Finney to sell his club.

By this time Brendan has heard about the plot to kill Finney and learned precisely how the thugs are connected to Cosmo, who is convinced that Kate is part of a conspiracy to destroy him because she is dating Brendan.

The rain continues unabated, along with the mulling and some sexual fumbling that is more alluded to than actually seen, and Kate must decide whether fancying Brendan makes more sense than dealing with Cosmo's mean streak.

Brendan certainly is a safer bet. At one point the sordid tycoon punches Kate thrice, once in the nose and twice in the abdomen during a vicious attack.

One musical sequence performed by the Krakow Poland Jazz Ensemble offering a distinctly modern version of "The Star-Spangled Banner" during an "American Day" business promotion is eerily humorous, but that is about all.

Griffith, Jones and Sting deliver adequate performances considering the paucity of pungent writing, and Bean is mildly appealing as the jazz fan unwittingly involved in the onrushing nastiness.

"Stormy Monday" is Rated R. Running time is 98 minutes.

French 18th century market bustles during Jour de Fete

By Pamela Selbert
Staff affiliate

Ste. Genevieve will recreate the bustle and excitement of an 18th century French open market when the town hosts its annual Jour de Fete ("festival day") Aug. 13 and 14.

"Twenty-three years ago local residents decided that the tradition of open market, born with our town more than 250 years ago, but long since out of vogue, was too important to let go," said Juanita Holst, of the Ste. Genevieve Tourist Information Center.

The new annual Jour de Fete started small, "with only 12 booths," but has grown into a major event, Holst said.

"This year more than 400 craft vendors and vendors from all over the country will participate, offering their handmade wares, all of which might have been available during Colonial days."

Crafts will include woodworking, needlework, pottery making, ceramics, doll making, jewelry making, painting, blacksmithing and quilting. One special crafts event, Holst said, will be a quilt auction.

Also plentiful during the two-day event will be "picnic" foods of all types.

"We're expecting between 10,000 and 20,000 visitors, so there will be plenty of food, from barbecue to sausages to fried chicken and everything in between, including drinks of all varieties," Holst said.

In addition to the vendors selling drinks, the Ste. Genevieve Winery will be open, offering its own "fruit of the vine." Tours of the winery will be available, and local wines may be sampled. Local restaurants will offer French and German foods.

Another important part of the Jour de Fete, Holst said, will be the walking tours of the town's eight historic homes. Ste. Genevieve is well-known for its early French origins.

The town, founded in 1735, is the oldest white-founded settlement in Missouri, she said. Many of the early homes still stand and may be visited.

"Three of the homes were built in 1770, and of these, the Amoureux home is an excellent example of the French Creole style, in which construction was done with vertical logs. There are 50 such homes in town, and most are still lived in," Holst said. All eight "tour" homes date from late 18th century or early 19th century.

Norman trusses are another interesting characteristic of these early French buildings, she said. "These are sturdy rafters put together entirely with wooden pegs, square pegs in round holes, and some of these may be seen today."

The Greentree Inn, built in 1789, was the first inn and tavern and tobacco shop west of the Mississippi. The inn is part of the walking tour.

"It's a fascinating old building," Holst said, "with three fireplaces and secret hiding places behind them, which may be seen today, where women and children could go in case of an Indian raid."

Tickets may be purchased individually at each historic site, or a pass to all may be bought at a slightly lower rate at the Tourist Information Center on South Third Street.

Music will play an important role in the fete. A German band will move through the town's historic section performing from the back of a truck, and strolling musicians will play. A melodeon will be offered in the winery's backyard, and there will be performances of French clogging, a parade of fully attired French Marines, and an Indian pow wow.

The Jour de Fete will kick off at 8 a.m. Aug. 13, with a 5K run through the residential areas of town, and a one-mile "fun run" for the less competitive. Both events are open to the public, and participants may register on arrival.

The fun run is free, and there is a $5 admission to the 5K run. Both runs will depart from the town's Pere Marquette Park. Those who wish more information on the event should call Dan Brown at 883-3752.

The 44-year-old swimming pool in Wilson Park is as busy as ever with 90-plus temperatures enveloping the area for most of the summer.

Tuesday was no different, except for a brief thunderstorm that briefly shut down the pool. But the pool reopened as soon as the threatening weather moved out of the area and the swimmers went back to enjoying the water.

Easy changes revive tired room

By Nancy Bridwell
American Society of Interior Designers

There's no need to live with a tired, outdated room because you cannot face the time and expense of redoing the entire space. Easy changes involving color, texture or detail often can achieve amazing results in creating a new look without major surgery.

Color makes the most dramatic impression as you enter a room, yet a color change can be as easy on the budget as a few gallons of high-quality paint and one day's labor. An alternative to repainting the walls is to paint the wood trim and doors a fresh color (pastel, ivory, even black) using a high-gloss paint finish.

For another easy color change, drape a chair or sofa with fabric, securing it in key places with slipcover pins, and then tying it in place with decorative cord. Shop the discount fabric stores for colorful prints, shiny chintzes and even classic white for "summer dress."

Finally, fresh color can be introduced easily with decorative pillows. Discount and import stores carry a wide selection of sizes and colors. For extra punch, choose the largest size possible, and dress up with tassels and decorative cording sewn on by hand. You can even wrap a pillow form like a present, using bright fabric and wide ribbon.

Another change that is easy to achieve is the introduction of textural contrasts. Try these additions: tropical plants with differently shaped leaves, matchstick window shades from local import companies, shiny paint on walls or furniture and straw floor matting. Paint smooth lamp shades shiny colors or cover them with textured fabric. Be sure contrasts are strong and close to each other: baskets against shiny brass; rough pottery against smooth,

Making changes in detail is a third strategy for updating a room. The opportunities to add detail through interesting items and accessories are limitless. Try these tactics:

Think in groupings, little compositions here and there. For instance, study the effect that a collection of objects on a table creates—possibly two books, a vase, a lamp and a figurine—all carefully arranged in still-life grouping. A wall picture over a chair that is next to a 3-foot tropical plant can form another arrangement. Consider framing five family photographs and arranging them on a table in front of a lamp to illuminate them. Combine a live plant, a statue and a decorative bowl.

Whether you choose to breathe life into a tired room through changes in color, texture or detail—or all three—you'll discover that thinking small can bring impressive results.

This classic piece of furniture, a pie safe, can be built by the amateur woodworker. It can serve as a cabinet, clothing chest or buffet while adding a nostalgic touch to your home. The pie safe features frame-and-panel construction, two storage drawers, adjustable shelves, and pierced-copper door panels. Overall dimensions are 14 by 36 by 52 inches. Plans include full-size pattern for the copper panel design, scale drawings, complete materials list, and illustrated cutting and assembly instructions. To receive them, "Old-Fashioned Pie Safe 549" and send $4.95 to The Woodwright, 63141, P.O. Box 1000, Bixby, Okla. Add $2.95 for a catalog listing many other plans that may be purchased. Coupons and two free plans will accompany your catalog.

Tips simplify painting, repair jobs

Painting
Porch floor: Concrete surfaces absorb a lot of paint. Make the job easier by using a roller with an extension handle. First, use a 4-inch brush and paint a border around the floor where it meets the wall. Then use your roller to spread the paint to meet the border. Do a small section at a time (about 2 by 3 feet) and don't try to stretch the paint.

Doors
When they stick: Check the hinge screws on the door first, then the hinge screws on the frame. If they are loose, the door will sag just enough to rub against the frame causing it to bind and stick. If the hinge screws are loose, open the door as far as it can be opened. Tighten all of the screws and pack the holes with wooden match sticks that have been dipped in glue so that they form a flush surface. Before you replace the screws, be certain the glue has set.

Doors
When they stick: Check the hinge screws on the door first, then the hinge screws on the frame. If they are loose, the door will sag just enough to rub against the frame causing it to bind and stick. If the hinge screws are loose, open the door as far as it can be opened. Tighten all of the screws and pack the holes with wooden match sticks that have been dipped in glue so that they form a flush surface. Before you replace the screws, be certain the glue has set.

Ceramic Tile
Stained grouting: A typewriter eraser will clean dull or stained grouting between ceramic tiles. Just rub and erase the dirt.

Loose wall or counter tile:
Carefully remove the loose tile. Scrape the adhesive from the back of the tile or scrub with steel wool. Remove the adhesive left in the space on the wall or the counter top. Apply a thin, even coat of tile adhesive to the back of the tile and to the wall or counter surface. For a strong, long-lasting bond, score the glue-covered surfaces with a fork. The roughened surfaces will ensure a firm grip. Hold the tile in place for a few minutes exerting light pressure on the wall, or weighing it down with books on a counter top.

Doors
When they stick: Check the hinge screws on the door first, then the hinge screws on the frame. If they are loose, the door will sag just enough to rub against the frame causing it to bind and stick. If the hinge screws are loose, open the door as far as it can be opened. Tighten all of the screws and pack the holes with wooden match sticks that have been dipped in glue so that they form a flush surface. Before you replace the screws, be certain the glue has set.

screws are tightened, the problem can be corrected by adjusting one of the hinges. To determine which one, first determine where the door binds. If it binds near the bottom, the top hinge requires the adjustment. Prop the door open to a 90-degree angle, placing magazines under and around it. Next remove the screws that hold the hinge leaf in place. Cut a piece of cardboard, the same size as the hinge leaf and place it behind the hinge leaf. With the cardboard shim in place, replace the screws. Try the door again. If not corrected, try more cardboard.

Sliding doors: If it sticks in the track, open the door fully, clean the track along the floor and lubricate the sides and the bottom of the track with a silicone lubricating compound.

Swinging doors: Dust is the culprit if your swinging door sticks. The spring device in the floor is jammed. Unscrew the plates under the bottom hinge and vacuum carefully. If you find any rust, scrape it off. Then spray the spring and the pivot with a silicone lubricating compound.

Cold rag can cure vapor lock

By Richard Harris

Wolf Creek Pass, on U.S. Hwy. 160 in southern Colorado, winds steeply up the mountains to cross the continental divide at an elevation of 10,850 feet above sea level. The view is spectacular.

Every day during the summer, hundreds of tourists bound for Mesa Verde National Park take unplanned stops during the climb up the pass—but not to admire the scenery.

Wolf Creek Pass probably holds the record for the most automobile breakdowns on a 20-mile stretch of any U.S. highway. The problem is a phenomenon called vapor lock.

Vapor lock occurs when the air temperature in your car's engine compartment becomes hot enough to boil gasoline while it is still in the fuel line. The gasoline forms bubbles that prevent the fuel pump from pumping gas to the carburetor. When this happens, your car simply stops running, just as if you had run out of gas.

Vapor lock happens in hot summer weather. It happens most often while the car is climbing a long, steep grade, because the car's engine is working harder and producing more excess heat. It is a particular problem at high altitudes, where less atmospheric pressure means gasoline (or any liquid) boils at a lower temperature.

When vapor lock stops your car, the first step is to get the immobile vehicle out of the traffic lane. On an uphill mountain road, you do not have to get out and push. Just coast backwards (watching out behind you very carefully) while steering onto the shoulder of the road. Then park the car with the hand brake on.

Most drivers will remain in the driver's seat, trying to start the car and wondering why it refuses to cooperate, until one of three things happens: the battery runs down from repeated unsuccessful starting attempts; the engine finally cools enough to cure the vapor lock, and the car starts as mysteriously as it stopped (which usually takes about an hour with the hood raised, or twice as long with the hood closed); or the highway patrol arrives and helps start the car using the same trick I'm about to tell you.

First, raise the hood and find the fuel pump. If you don't know where to look, find the carburetor (on top of the engine, underneath the air filter) and follow the fuel line back away from the carburetor to the fuel pump. A vapor lock means that the heater fuel line, the one coming forward to the fuel pump from the gas tank, is too hot.

Soak a rag (a washcloth or diaper will work nicely) with cool water and place it over the fuel line and fuel pump. Within five minutes, the fuel line will cool down enough so the car will start.

If you were only halfway up the mountain when vapor lock stopped you, you will want to take precautions so it won't happen again before you reach the top. You can do this by soaking the rag with more water and wrapping it around the fuel line. A more effective method is to find a piece of aluminum foil and wrap that around the fuel line to dissipate heat and prevent another vapor lock.

Drive off normally, but if your car is equipped with an air conditioner, don't turn it on. Air conditioning puts an extra load on your car's engine and makes it overheat faster.

What if you don't have water in your car to soak a rag with? Or what if, after cooling off the fuel pump and fuel line, you find that the engine still won't start and the temperature gauge or warning light on your dashboard shows that the engine is overheated?

In either case, the only solution is to let things cool off naturally. It will take a while. Rather than sitting around getting frustrated by the car's refusal to start, get out and take a walk.

Tips on repair in free booklet

Home repair and maintenance tips culled from high school industrial arts teachers from around the country are featured in a new brochure, "Secrets of the Master Craftsman."

The brochure is available free from Boyle-Midway Household Products Inc. (P.O. Box 561, Gibbstown, N.J.) on behalf of its 3-in-One Household Oil and Plastic Wood Cellulose Fibre Filler. Graham Blackburn, author and illustrator of numerous home repair and maintenance books, judged and selected the 25 tips in the publication.

"The most striking tips were the logical ones—home suggestions that are simple and easy to follow," Blackburn said. "I also chose some for their sheer 'what-oh' but really interesting application, like getting longer use from fishing flies and restructuring the runners of wooden chests of drawers."

"Grade A Fancy" isn't just talk. It's a U.S. Government standard. And it means the best you can buy—in any store. Take canned corn. "Grade A Fancy" is the only kind we sell. So the kernels have to be young and perfectly cut—no bits of cob. The color has to be bright. And a grading expert must judge the flavor "very good" or better. At ALDI, we guarantee you'll like our products as much as any national brand. But if a can of our corn—or anything else—doesn't meet your standards, just bring it back. And we'll refund your money under our "Goodness Guarantee."

Hot weather, drought mean double jeopardy

By Robert J. Dingwall

Several questions this week deal with problems brought on by the drought and high temperatures.

A reader from Ballwin asks about patio tomato plants that drop flowers before fruit sets. They are container plants that have been watered and fed regularly.

Plants have grown well, indicating that high temperatures are at the source of the problem. Tomatoes like uniform moisture, so it is important to water often enough that soil never dries out excessively. Even watering once a day may not be sufficient during extreme heat, especially if the container is too small to adequately hold the heavy root system that a tomato is capable of producing.

While mulching helps hold moisture in the garden, it is of little value with container plants because of the limited growing area.

The best course of action is to schedule two waterings on a hot day. This may or may not improve the situation, however. During extremely hot weather, the problem may persist no matter what is done.

But the outlook down the road is more favorable. If given sufficient moisture, plants should set fruit again when the temperatures drop.

Plants react differently to hot weather (90 degrees and above). Flowers of some types may fail to open, or may drop prematurely. Like tomatoes, peppers are also prone to dropping flowers without forming fruit when temperatures are high.

Some plants that fail to produce in hot weather may need to be removed once production ends and replanted with new seed so that a good crop can be attained later when the weather is cooler. These might include tomatoes, beans, cucumbers, squash, carrots or peppers.

Another question deals with burning bushes that are dropping leaves. The plants were set out in 1987, watered at regular intervals, and did well, turning a brilliant red last fall. Of four plants, only two are shedding leaves.

Again, I would attribute this to weather factors. Since only two plants are affected, it may be there is a variation in soil structure causing a difference in drainage. Or, it could be that one area dries out more quickly than another because it has less organic content.

It is important to check the soil around the base of the main stem. Digging with a small trowel, make sure the soil ball has not dried out. This has been found to be a factor in some cases as soil media that a plant has been grown in is very light compared to the soil in the yard. The media around the plant can dry out more rapidly and even though new roots have penetrated into the surrounding soil, they are not of sufficient size to maintain the plant under the conditions found at present.

A soil ball that has dried out should be checked periodically. When it seems dry, apply extra water around the base of the plant.

Another reader has a dogwood that lost most of its leaves earlier. Some new growth has been made but it is minimal.

This is a case where soil was allowed to dry out before the gardener realized water was needed. If the plant can hold the growth it has for the balance of the summer, it should be able to overwinter, but flowering next year is unlikely. A drought-weakened plant will miss out on the bud initiation period, which is taking place now.

It is important to keep the plant watered throughout drought periods, but do not overwater as this could lead to further root loss. Apply a light mulch around the base if not already there to help hold moisture and further protect the root system.

Compact garden

HAVING NO SPACE for a garden does not limit the container garden. This compact determinate plant will yield many, fresh, ripe tomatoes for summer salads; but gardeners should remember to water often.

Wrench selection a gripping subject

By Al Schneider

Mr. Tinker

Wrenches are an indispensable part of any do-it-yourselfer's tool box. They are offered in a variety of sizes and styles to meet a multitude of needs. I have a few tips that should help you to select the right wrench for your uses.

The most popular and usable tool is the open-end adjustable wrench. This instrument has one movable jaw and one fixed jaw that comes in sizes from 4 to 24 inches. If you are just beginning and are unsure of your needs, I would recommend finding a three-wrench set with lengths of 4, 8 and 12 inches, at least. The screw adjusters allow you to fit almost any size. However, these wrenches do not grip as firmly as fixed varieties. I check my adjustment periodically to make sure it is firm when under pressure.

For most mechanical work you will need to find quality open-end wrenches. Because they have a stronger grip and are generally less bulky, open-end wrenches can fit into tighter spots.

Hexagon-shaped Allen wrenches should be in every home tool kit. These handy instruments fit neatly inside the heads of screws and bolts so that any do-it-yourselfer can easily leverage out recessed setscrews and locking screws. Although used less frequently, Allen wrenches are indispensable for making adjustments on appliances and other tools.

Socket wrenches are another handy tool for working on appliances or your vehicle. Using the ratchet-type handle and angled handle extensions, you can get into awkward corners that no other wrench can fit.

Pipe wrenches, also known as Stilton wrenches, are serrated tools with slightly-curved jaws. These wrenches are ideal for completing plumbing jobs with threaded pipes and fittings. Always have two wrenches on hand, one to hold the fitting and another to turn the pipe into place. Ten-inch and 12-inch sizes are the most popular.

When using any wrench, I always clean the head of the bolt or screw before I begin. Grease and oil can cause a wrench to slip and have too much play. I also position the wrench so that it can be pulled in the direction that the jaws face. If your wrench slips repeatedly, check the size or your adjustment. Repeated slipping will round off and ruin a bolt or nut head. It also causes painful skinned knuckles.

By choosing the right tool and tackling the job with care and patience, you should be able to loosen any tough nut or bolt. If you have any questions about wrenches or other home improvement projects, call me at Central Hardware's Mr. Tinker Hotline, 946-3600. I'd be happy to help.

Q: I will shortly leave one employer in order to operate my own business. I will receive a cash settlement on my employer's pension plan, in which I have been participating for a number of years. I was advised by someone in the personnel department to find out about "rolling over" this payment into an IRA or Keogh. What does this mean?

A: A rollover is a tax-free transfer of cash or other assets from one retirement plan in your case, your present employer's — into another — an IRA or Keogh plan, as suggested. A rollover is an allowable payment which cannot be deducted on your income tax return. There is a time limit which you should be aware of, however. You must complete the transfer by the 60th day after the distribution from your employer's plan. That time element is certainly sufficient for setting up an IRA at your bank, and transfer within that period will mean that your funds will not be affected in any way by penalties or tax liability.

The Home Front

By ROD FLOOD

Contrary to popular opinion, most senior citizens stay put, and fewer than 5 percent pack up and move to a retirement haven. Result: much of the Midwest and Northeast is "gray," that is, the sunbelt is the oldest population in the country.

To remove the residue left by double-sided tape, use rubber-cement thinner on a rag.

Small pictures look more important if you frame, the grouping with molding.

If grease spots won't wash off walls, apply stain-fighter before repainting or papering.

"Smart-house" systems were developed at a home builder's convention. Dishwasher can "ask" water heater for hot water at certain temperature; lights can be turned off automatically if no one is in a room; appliances can be turned on by phone; security is built-in. By 1995, 25 to 30 percent of homes are expected to have automated home control; more than a million homes already have some form of it.

Seebold among top racing competitors for Bud Light title

Top-caliber powerboat drivers, including Granite City native Bill Seebold, the winningest driver in the history of the sport, and his son, Mike, will be vying for the checkered flag and $25,000 in prize money at the 17th annual Bud Light World Championship Grand Prix Races, presented by the Concord Village Lions Club, Aug. 12-14, at George Winter Park in Fenton.

The event is the eighth stop on the International Outboard Grand Prix (IOGP) circuit. Points scored in the event not only count toward the American Powerboat Association's North American Champ Boat championship, but for world titles in both SST-140 and Mod VP classes as authorized by the Union of International Motorboating (UIM), the world-sanctioning body of Brussels, Belgium.

In addition, the Champ Boat race has been designated as part of the FONDA world series of two-litre outboard racing — one of only two FONDA races in the United States.

The Seebolds — who make up the Bud Light Racing Team — will be among 70 drivers competing in the Champ, Mod VP and SST-140 categories.

Bill Seebold won the Bud Light World Championship Grand Prix race, which turned out to be pivotal as the points he gained helped him win the Budweiser World Championship Grand Prix on the FONDA circuit.

Bill competes for the Budweiser er Racing Team on the FONDA circuit in Europe and Asia, and the St. Louis and Augusta, Ga., races count toward the points championship on the circuit. He captured the title by winning the Singapore race in November, outpacing Jonathon Jones of England. Mike Seebold, 26, finished fourth in the season series.

On the IOGP circuit, Mike struggled through a season of repeated engine problems. Bill experienced the same misfortune the first half of 1987, but rebounded to finish strong with consecutive victories at Minneapolis, St. Louis, and the season finale at Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

This year, the father and son team is enjoying greater success as they have combined to post three firsts and a second place in the six IOGP races thus far. Mike won the season opener April 24 at Los Angeles and also outduelled Bill for the checkered flag at the Champion Spark Plug Powerboat Classics on July 24 at Minneapolis. Bill, meanwhile, won the Sacramento Water Festival on July 4 and finished second to Mike in a thrilling race at Minneapolis.

On May 15, Mike also captured first place at the Budweiser Salish Powerboat Race in the SST-140 division at Jensen Beach, Fla.

After 25 years of powerboat racing, Bill Seebold, the senior member of the Bud Light Racing Team, is undoubtedly the sport's most successful powerboat driver ever. Winner of the 1982 World

BILL SEEBOLD, a Granite City native and one of the winningest powerboat drivers in the history of the sport, will compete for the title of the 17th annual Bud Light World

Formula One title, Seebold has won more national and international championships than any other driver in the history of the sport.

It's no wonder, either. Born to boating fanatics, he began racing as a youngster. In 1966, he was voted the sport's top driver and became the youngest man ever to be inducted into the Gulf Marine Hall of Fame. In 1974, he was voted "Driver of the Year," and to date has 60 world records to his credit.

Drivers will test their boats on Aug. 12, from 9 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. at George Winter Park. Qualifying heats and time trials will be held between 12:30 p.m. and 5 p.m. Aug. 13. On Aug. 14, the SST-140 final (30 laps) will begin at 1 p.m., the Mod VP final (30 laps) will begin at 2 p.m., and the Champ final (50 laps) is scheduled to start at 3:30 p.m. The awards ceremony is expected to start at approximately 5:15 p.m.

Tickets to the event are $8 in advance and $10 at the gate. Ticketmaster outlets and Dierberg's stores throughout the St. Louis area.

Warrior practice starts early — very early

When I was a kid, summer never seemed to last long enough. Actually, it was a lot longer then than it is now.

Summer usually came at noon on some day right around June 1 when that last bell of the last day of school rang gloriously. It seemed like no time until that awful morning when August had when we trudged back, up another grade on the educational ladder but no happier to be back.

It was almost three months. Now, summer is barely two months. Our last high school sports coverage came in the June 15 edition, when Edwardsville High School's baseball team was knocked out in the state semifinals. The Illinois High School Association will crank up another year of competition on Monday.

The school sports season will start as early as can be in Granite City. The Warrior soccer team will beat everyone in the punch — not an unusual feat for Gene Baker's boys — when it starts the inaugural practice of the season not under the hot August sun, but under the lights at the Gauntlet at 12:01 a.m. on Aug. 15.

"I thought it would be a fun thing," Baker said. "We'll be the first team in the state practicing. I'm going to try to get the TV stations over here."

A week of vacation will be followed by a return to work-bring and early on Monday, Aug. 15. Bright as in the lights at the soccer field — early as in midnight.

"Oh, well, I usually try to catch some of that first day of practice anyway. At least this one should be a little cooler. Baker is taking a page from some of the major college basketball powers. The first day of practice for NCAA teams is Oct. 15, and a program like Kentucky's can get 20,000 people in the arena for the Wildcats' midnight practice that first morning."

"It's been done in other high school sports, but I don't believe any soccer teams have done it," Baker said.

A few hours of sleep will be followed by another practice, probably around 11 a.m., according to Baker.

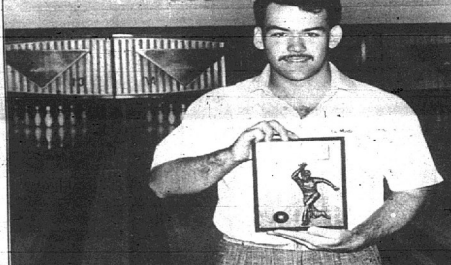

It's hard to say how many people will be willing to pay $1 to come out and watch the first practice. The soccer Warriors will be fairly inexperienced as far as varsity competition is concerned.

Seniors Scott Stone and Chris Ryan will be team leaders, and seniors Rob Strubberg, Chris Nolan and Brian Bjorkman also

COULDS JUNIOR BOWLER

STACY JACKSON

STACY JACKSON, 15, of Granite City, bowled a perfect game at Bowling Lanes July 29. His 300 game came in the third of a four-game series.

Granite City bowler rolls perfect game

Many bowlers wait their entire careers without ever accomplishing what Stacy Jackson did on July 29 at the age of 15 — he rolled a perfect 300 game.

Jackson, 3246 Westchester Drive, Granite City, produced his perfect in the third of a four-game series at Bowling Lanes, 5050 Nameoki Road. Bowling in the Friday Morning Scratch League, Jackson began the day with games of 222 and 213 before hitting the jackpot. He followed his gem with a 236 to finish with a 971 series.

"I didn't think it was going to be anything special when I started the game," said Jackson, who has been bowling for 12 years. "But I couldn't even look at the last shot."

It was perfect, just like all of the others. Jackson said he had a few tense moments late in the game, but all of his shots connected. The Granite City

High School sophomore hopes to go on to college where bowling is a major program, such as Wichita State or Buffalo State.

Jackson has bowled two 700 three-game series this season and has a 207 average in the Friday Morning Scratch League. He has competed regularly in leagues at Bowling and Granite Bowl as well as other major bowling centers in the St. Louis area. He has competed in the St. Louis Junior Archway Tournament — a monthly traveling tournament for talented juniors — for the last four years.

The Friday Morning Scratch League is just one of the league's in Bowling's highly successful Junior Bowling program. Shirley Byrd is the director.

Jackson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Jackson.

Sunday twilight racing now at Fairmount Park

July 31 marked the start of the new Sunday twilight thoroughbred racing at Fairmount Park.

The 5:30 p.m. twilight post time has been successful in terms of attendance and handle in other parts of the country with similar results expected at Fairmount Park. A crowd of 3,617 wagered $74,430 on the 11-race card. The new racing schedule, implemented for late summer and fall, also features night racing every Wednesday through Saturday at 7:30 p.m.

Sunday racing action begins at 1:30 p.m. with intertrack wagering in the clubhouse on the Sportsman Park harness card followed immediately by the live thoroughbred card at 5:30 p.m.

Also under way at Fairmount Park on Sundays through Aug. 21 is the Pick Ten Challenge. Pick all 10 winning horses on the Sunday cards and drive away in a brand new Hyundai from Bonmarito-Hyndai. In the progressive contest, cars not won are added to the next week's prizes.

GC tennis tourney starts Friday

By Al Barnes

The 31st annual Granite City Wilson Park Invitational Tennis Tournament will get underway Friday and will conclude Sunday afternoon. The tourney is sanctioned by the United States and Missouri Valley Tennis Associations.

The men's singles division has drawn the largest list of entries including Paul Wagner of Belleville, who finished second to Andy Davis of Webster Groves last year. Other men's singles entries are: Ray Scott of Granite City, Rick Crain, Tom Lee, Steve Hagedorn, Mark Gray, Dave Puetz, Bob Meyer, Marco Winter, John Greve, Frank Millitello and Chris Grabner.

Meyer is coach of the SIUE men's and women's tennis teams. Winter, one of Meyer's Cougar players from Holland, will team up with Meyer for the men's doubles.

The women's singles had drawn only three entries as of Wednesday afternoon. They are Debbie Russell, Julie Campbell and Lisa Campbell. If a fourth woman enters before Saturday, 8 a.m., there will be a women's singles draw. Only one 35 and over women division entry was received and that was Sherry Silbersher. The men's 35 and over singles has Jim Monika, who was second in 1987, Roger

Guss wins first U.M.P. race

By Joe Senter Correspondent

Ray Guss Jr. won his first U.M.P. Late Model stock car feature event at the Tri-City Speedway this season as truck champion Mike Wallace dropped out with carburetor trouble.

Guss outduelled a full lineup of late models as they circled the half-mile dirt track. Bill Shaw took the lead at the green flag and held on for the first part of the 20-lap event as Wallace edged out. But Wallace's engine ran sour as his carburetor malfunctioned, forcing him out of the race. Wallace, the brother of N.A.S.C.A.R. driver Rusty Wallace, was driving the Althoff Trucking Co. sponsored car owned by Bob Quinn.

Bobby Dietz's car was engulfed in flames as he was going through the No. 3 and 4 turns and he was quickly extinguished by the track fireman. Dietz escaped injury and his car suffered minor damage.

Ron Fisher finished second to Guss with Bert Cheatham taking third, John Proir fourth, Bill Shaw fifth and Ray Emiling Jr. sixth. Cheatham and Tom Helfrich took the heat races, John Seets made a clean sweep in the Sportmen's Car, taking his heat race and feature event. John Seets was followed by Rick Ray, Gary Archambault, Jake Seets, Dan Connoyer and Bob Brown.

Archambault took the other heat. Don McElroy Jr. made a sweep in the Street and Stock cars taking first in the heat and feature event. Dave Jones took second in the feature, John Stanton third and Rick Carter fourth.

NOTE: Feature event winner Friday night in Godfrey were John Seets in Sportmen's Car, John Stanton in Street Stock Car and Jim Bell in Bomber Cars.

Barrington wins state title

American Legion State Finals

By Carl Jacobs Staff writer

ALTON — It wasn't a perfect championship game by any stretch of the imagination. But it was a classic struggle and an entertaining contest as Barrington Post 158 defeated Bartonville Limestone Post 979 7-6 to win the Legion State Championship at Gordon Moore Park on Sunday.

Both teams kept each other in the game with errors and unearned runs. Despite the blunders, it was a dog fight to the end as the lead changed hands two times. The score was also tied once and almost noted a second time. In the end, Barrington's 25-12, six-inning Limestone's last rally and advances to South Bend, Indiana Regional where it will be in an eight-team tournament. The Legion State Championship was the third for Barrington.

"We have kids on this team that were in the state high school tournament so they have been in some big games," said Barrington coach Kirby Smith said. "The pressure in this type of game was nothing new to them."

Barrington grabbed a 2-0 lead in the game in the second inning. Byron Bradley singled and launched a ball into the bleachers. The first two Post 979 hitters to start the third inning. Limestone shortstop Jim Thome then drove in a run with a fielder's choice groundout. Slagle and Barrington escaped the inning with the lead when Todd Davis fled out to left.

Barrington wasn't so lucky in the fifth inning, however. Three Post 158 errors allowed Limestone to score three unearned runs. Limestone pitcher Mark Poles reached base to start the inning when Barrington shortstop Todd Huddleston couldn't field and between-pitch grounder. Matt Legaspi followed that with an infield single and an error on Barrington first baseman Minchik loaded the bases.

Thome then singled home a run, tying the score 2-2 and knocking Slagle out of the game. It was a bitter exit for Slagle who gave just the two hits and struckout three.

Dave Anderson replaced Slagle and had an inauspicious entrance. With the bases loaded he got Todd Davis to ground back to the mound. He looked home, hesitated, and instead of starting a 1-2-3 double play, Anderson tried to throw to second and launched a ball into center field. Greg Bradshaw and Legaspi scored giving Limestone a 4-2 lead.

A walk, a single and a two-base error helped Barrington tie the score 4-2 in the sixth.

After evening the score, Barrington then forged ahead with two runs in the seventh and one in the eighth. Barrington pitcher Anderson walked and lead-off man Brett Plaskas bunted. Limestone hurler Foles fielded the ball late and his off-balance throw to first went into the bullpen. Anderson scored and Plaskas went to third. Plaskas score one batter later when Mensik singled.

Barrington increased its lead to 7-4 in the ninth on a walk, a single and a sacrifice fly.

The Barrington lead, which looked safe, was almost not enough thanks to overthrow by Post 158 catcher Jason Huddleston. With two outs, Bradshaw singled to give Limestone a chance. Anderson then struckout Thome but Huddleston dropped the third strike and overcame first base. Bradshaw scored and Thome wound up at third. Thome scored on an infield single to bring Limestone within 7-6, but Anderson got Marty Reno to hit into a force out to end the game.

Collinsville Raiders practice Saturday

The Collinsville Raiders football team will hold its first practice this Saturday at 10 a.m. The practice will be held at the Collinsville Sports Complex. Players must wear shorts, T-shirts, socks and cleats or tennis shoes. A sign-up session will be held before the practice at 8 a.m. Registration is $25 for the first player or cheerleader per family and $15 for each additional child.

Children from kindergarten through eighth grade can sign up. For more information, call Dan at 345-8480.

Ballpark wedding by The Man

I'm Gettin' Married In The Evening. So Get Me To The Ballpark On Time. Let's hear it for famine and pestilence. Just kidding. OK, let's hear it for the Cardinals.

Just kidding again. What are you going to do when it's this hot, hopeless and miserable? Mope? Cry? Not me. I say laugh in the face of misery. Especially if it's someone else's.

Speaking of misery, Brent and Lynne Hobbs got married the other day. Decked out in formal wear, they did it in front of God, the Stan Musial statue and 40 or 50 witnesses who were waiting for the Cardinals to unlock the Busch Stadium gates for the Expos contest Monday.

"We thought about it on and off for a couple months and decided it'd be fun so we called the Cardinals to see if it was OK," the 21-year-old bride said.

What does this tell you about the level to which the local baseball season has sunk? People have been reduced to hanging out at the corner of Broadway and Walnut and getting married to have fun. Makes you long for the good old days when a sordid affair would've been enough.

By Dennis Barnidge

Brent Hobbs, the 27-year-old groom/budding pizza magazine/seminar Cardinals fan, said the Busch Stadium wedding was a sentimental thing.

"I love the Cardinals. When I was working in Cape Girardeau, the guy I worked for had season tickets and I used to drive up and see 20 to 25 games a year."

"And when we were going out we used to come here a lot."

The Hobbses didn't want to get married at the Musial statue. They wanted to be inside the stadium. Home plate would have had kind of a cozy feel to it, don't you think?

"We asked if Ozzie Smith would be our best man," Lynne Hobbs said, adding that having the Bone Crusher stand up for Brent could've been topped off with Ernie Hays pounding out that dirty he plays during Redbirds rallies (talk about something from the good old days) as a wedding march.

But the Cardinals pool-hopped the idea of converting Busch Stadium into a chapel. This, after all, is staid, solid, church-going St. Louis. This isn't New York where people go around ripping the lags off mattresses and getting married while hopping up and down naked on one foot and juggling French poodles. Here, the Cardinals informed the Hobbses, people here go to church—not the ballpark—to get married.

The Cardinals even tried to talk the newlyweds out of tying the knot next to the Musial statue.

"They said we could do it, but they weren't too encouraging because they didn't want us to start something," Lynne Hobbs said.

Maybe the Cardinals could have suggested it might be better for Lynne and Brent, say, to try living together first.

The Cardinals have had worse ideas. Mike Lega comes immediately to mind.

Love, like a toothache, cannot be denied so the Hobbses tried a different tack. They checked with the Convention and Tourism Bureau where they hooked up with a couple of nice ladies who were tired of telling visiting concrete salesmen in town for a masonry convention, "No, PT's doesn't rent rooms."

The tourism ladies swooned at the idea of helping with a wedding where they didn't have to clean up.

It was sweet, not to mention sweaty. A little after 6 p.m. the preacher threw out the first vow. The Hobbses fielded it on the short hop and were on their way to bliss (marital, not the place named after Malcolm). A dozen minutes later, lips were locked and the deed was done.

Midnight

saw some varsity time in 1987. And of course there are a pair of blue-chip juniors, cousins Troy Adamitis and John VanBuskirk.

But Baker will be looking for someone to emerge at the goal-keeping position. That first practice will provide an opportunity for one to step forward to follow in the footsteps of Blasingame, Dutko, Krekovich et al.

Baker could be trying to direct some attention toward this relatively inexperienced team.

Unfortunately, a trip to Chicago on Labor Day for a possible game at Comiskey Park fell through. The Warriors were hoping to see a game involving the Brazilian national team and were trying to arrange a game against Park Ridge Maine South — the team they beat in the state title game last fall.

Meanwhile, I hope the midnight practice works well, but not too well. After all, I much prefer the 7 p.m. starting time for games. Soccer shouldn't be competing with David Letterman for my viewership.

Willmeth, Ken Kitzmiller and Bob Simpson.

The men's 35 and under doubles drew four entries: Roger Willmeth and Ken Kitzmiller, Joe Beyer and Mike Dean, Dennis Adamitis and John VanBuskirk, Larry Iffner and Mike Patrick, who won the titles in 1985 and 1986.

Participants in the 16 girls singles division includes Keri Weck-man of Granite City, who finished second to Andrea Benivenga last year. The other entries are: Leslie Cruel, Lisa Spano, Kristi Garcia and Kathy Sanderly.

The boys 14 and under singles entries are: Dan Debert of Granite City, Sukdith Punjasthikul, Tony Garcia, and Kevin Kassinger.

The junior ladies entries are: Kyle Meyer, Jeff Carter, Jim Bramlett, Chris Trittler and Steve Mochan.

Hadi Razzaq, Akira Sato, Greg Morris, Mike Greiner and John Trittler.

The junior ladies entries are: Kyle Meyer, Jeff Carter, Jim Bramlett, Chris Trittler and Steve Mochan.

MIKE TYSON, a former Cardinal infielder from 1972-79, now works as a salesman for the Coca-Cola company. Tyson is still as scrappy today as he was when he was a Cardinal a decade ago.

Former Card pitching Coke

By Glen Sparks
Staff affiliate
The word was out. The autograph hounds were ready. Everybody at the Disney Hotel in Florida was waiting for heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson to make his appearance. Rumor had it that Tyson would not only come to the hotel, but also would compete in the fabled Goofy Games. The participants in the games were introduced at a Sunday breakfast and the master of ceremonies announced "the man who you've all been waiting for, the talk of the hotel, Mike Tyson — former Cardinal infielder."

"I got the biggest hand and then when they saw I was standing up, I got the biggest laugh," said Tyson, who was at Disneyworld doing some promotional work for friend Bob Ramsey at KPLR-TV (Channel 11), one of the sponsors of the Goofy Games.

The former Cardinal infielder and native of Rocky Mount, N.C., said he takes constant kidding about sharing his name with the heavyweight champion. Ironically, Tyson works in sales for Coca-Cola in Maryland Heights while Mike Tyson the boxer pitches for rival Pepsi.

"We're going to have to put our gloves on and see who's No. 1," Tyson said, tongue in one cheek, as he chomped on a Beechnut in the other. "Think that'd be a great deal — Mike Tyson vs. Mike Tyson?"

Nice to know Tyson, almost a decade removed from his days with the Cardinals, still has the scrappiness that identified him as a big leaguer. He played for the Cardinals from 1972-79, then ended his career with the Cubs, sporting a lifetime batting average of .241. He started work at Coca-Cola just a few months after his release from Chicago in the spring of 1982. He was 32 years old and still had three years left on his five-year contract.

Although Pittsburgh manager Chuck Tanner invited him to the Pirates' training camp and Montreal general manager Bing Devine offered him a job as a minor league manager, Tyson called it quits.

He took the summer off — a summer without redeye flights and disabled lists — and then looked for a job. He talked to people at Anheuser-Busch before taking an offer at Coca-Cola and officially joining the suit-and-tie set.

For Coca-Cola, Tyson, now 38, calls on major chains, sets promotions and makes some public appearances. He lives in West St. Louis County with his wife, Sandy, son Torre, 12, and daughter Courtney, 9.

Although Tyson said his adjustment from baseball to a 9-to-5 job was relatively painless, he added that the baseball powers-that-be do not necessarily make it that way.

"They (baseball management) don't let you grow up," Tyson said. "The people in the front office do everything for you. You have agents who do everything for you. And so you become 23, 29 and before you know it, you're out of the game and you've got to go into the big world. You're not prepared."

Playing sports for your entire life can put some holes in your resume and Tyson said he was unsure at first what he wanted to do with his post-baseball life. Although he went to college (two years at Indian River Community College in Fort Pierce, Fla.), he did not major in anything and said he did not "have the guts to go into my own business."

He knew that while he loved the game, it was time to say goodbye and get into something else.

"I just wanted to root down for a little bit," he said. "I knew it was an opportunity. Most players don't have the opportunity to leave the game with two or three years of salary left and find out what they want to get into. I didn't go out cold turkey."

While Tyson enjoys his work at Coca-Cola, he said it could be time to make some changes.

"What those changes are at this point I'm not sure," he said. "I'd like to make changes whether it's in the Coca-Cola system or outside of the system. Like everyone else, if the right job came along, I'd take it."

Tyson competed with many great players

By Glen Sparks
Staff affiliate

Read the box scores and find out the numbers of the game. Talk to an ex-player and find out the soul of the game.

Mike Tyson was not a star, but he played with — and competed against — many of the game's top players of the 1970s. One of the most colorful was former Cardinal relief pitcher Al Hrabosky, the Mad Hungarian.

"As the name grew, he kind of grew into the name," Tyson said. "He's not really egotistical, but he has an air about him that he'd show. I think that was part of his act. Off the field he was just Al Hrabosky."

"Sometimes he got a little tiring. Sometimes I was playing short and (Ted) Sizemore was playing second. We'd just kind of look at each other and laugh, but that was his psyche."

Another teammate Tyson played with who created excitement by just walking on the field was Hall of Fame outfielder Lou Brock. Tyson watched Brock steal 118 bases in 1974.

"It was really exciting," he said. "Everytime he'd get on first you'd move to the top step of the dugout, just like I'm sure people in the stands would slide to the edge of their seats. That year was probably my most exciting with the Cardinals."

The Redbirds finished in second place that year with a .98 record, the best record during Tyson's years with the team from 1972-79.

"We could never put it together," he said. "My highlights were seeing guys like (Henry) Aaron, (Willie) McCovey, (Pete) Rose and (Bobby) Bonds play. I saw a lot of good ballplayers."

Two of Tyson's closest friends from baseball are two former catchers — former fan favorite Ted Simmons and little-known Ken Rudolph.

With the ever-changing rosters in the world of professional sports, close friendship does not come easy, he said.

"In baseball, if you have one or two good buddies on a team who you spend a lot of time with, it's amazing," he said. "You don't have many friends."

Tyson said times when you do you get traded or they get traded. You don't spend a whole heap of a lot of time with the same people."

Umpires have long, tough road to major leagues

By Scott Marlon

For Rich Reiker, the road to the pot of gold may have only a little farther to go. For Chuck Clabough, the journey has just begun.

Reiker and Clabough, along with fellow St. Louisans Gary Dunahue and Matt Malone, are professional baseball umpires. While their backgrounds may be different, they have at least two things in common: a love for baseball and a lot of patience. However long it takes, they are determined to make it to the big leagues.

RICH REIKER

Some kids are natural athletes. Rich Reiker is a natural umpire. "I started in Khoury League when I was 13," said the 26-year-old Afton resident, who umpires in the Class AAA American Association. "I was umpiring high school ball when I was still in high school. When I was 20, I was doing NCAA playoff games."

In January 1983, Reiker went to Ormond Beach, Fla., to attend an umpiring school operated by National League umpire Harry Wendelstedt. He graduated No. 1 in his class.

"About 170 guys go to Harry's school every year," Reiker said. "Twenty of them may get a minor-league job; the other 150 go home."

Reiker's professional career started in May 1983 in the Class A Midwest League. In May 1985 he moved up to the Class AA Eastern League. He spent a year there before being promoted to the American Association. He also worked in two instructional leagues in Florida and last year did winter ball in the Dominican Republic.

Despite Reiker's rapid rise through the umpiring ranks, he has no idea when, or if, he will get the call to the big leagues.

"Each (major) league has three umpiring supervisors," Reiker said. "You get ratings from the managers and the league president."

There are only 39 Triple A umpires; on a good year, one of them will get a major-league contract. "It doesn't make any difference to me which league it would be. I live a few minutes from Busch Stadium; but if the American League offered me a contract, I'd be there today."

Reiker noted that minor-league umpires are not affiliated with the major-league umpires' union.

"Under the current contract, big-league umpires get $40,000 to $105,000 a year, plus about $150 a day for expenses," he said. "Umpiring is not a high-security job, but I'm having fun. That pot of gold at the end of the rainbow makes it worth the wait."

GARY DUNAHUE

The nomadic life of a professional umpire may have similarities to that of a touring musician, but there were not any groupies or limousines waiting for Gary Dunahue when he arrived in Greenville, S.C., to work a Class AA Southern League series. There was just a hotel room and a well-deserved rest after a nine-hour drive from Memphis.

"The travel can be pretty difficult," said Dunahue, 32, of Overland. "You're away from your family for six months a year and you're dealing with daily pressures. You're always under the gun."

Dunahue, a former baseball player at Florissant Valley Community College and Southwest Missouri State University, graduated No. 1 in his class in 1981 from the Wendelstedt School. After a brief stay in the rookie Gulf Coast League, he spent about a year and a half in the Class A Florida State League.

Since the start of '85, he has umpired in the Southern League. "When you first get into the game, you as well as the players are young and you're not used to the lifestyle and attitudes of pro baseball," Dunahue said. "As you gain experience, a mutual relationship grows. You realize it's a job—you can't let something carry over to the next night."

"If I didn't think I was capable, I'd go ahead and get out of it. But there's no way I'm going to give up. Baseball is a great game and I love umpiring."

MATT MALONE

The life of a pro umpire may not be perfect, but Matt Malone has no complaints.

"It's like 'Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous'; you just don't make the money," said Malone, a 23-year-old Class A Midwest League ump from O'Fallon, Mo. "Sometimes you wish you could see friends, but it's a part of the job. You can love baseball, but you're at the part only four or five hours a day. This lifestyle is the biggest thing to get used to."

Malone grew up in Lake St. Louis near American League umpire Dave Phillips, who suggested he join from the Greater St. Louis Umpires Association.

"That's where Rich (Reiker) and Gary (Dunahue) started," Malone said. "In January of '86, I went to Harry Wendelstedt's school."

Malone umpired in the Pioneer League (a rookie circuit covering Canada, Montana, Utah and Idaho) from June through September of 1986. He is starting his second full season in the Midwest League.

"I have no timetable (for getting promoted)," Malone said. "Once you get in the game, you've got to refine yourself and work on mechanics. Things are going to happen. Managers are going to test you and see how you react to situations."

Class A umpires get approximately $1,800 to $1,700 per month for expenses. Class AA umpires get slightly more and rookie-league umpires slightly less. Reiker gets $2,600 a month in Class AAA.

"The money in the minor leagues has slowly gotten better," Malone said.

"Everybody likes to have money, but you've got to live within your self. I wanted to be an umpire."

CHUCK CLABOUGH

Situations wanted: Chuck Clabough will answer as many of these calls as possible in his climb through baseball's umpiring ranks. The latest step up that ladder—following Little League and slow-pitch softball—is a Gulf Coast League (rookie league) assignment in Sarasota, Fla., which he reported to June 16.

Clabough, 22, of Manchester, who earlier gained experience working spring training games, was one of 20 umpires chosen from an original pool of 330 to go through a pair of umpiring camps to earn professional assignments.

What separates umpiring in Little League—which Clabough did for six years with the Ballwin Athletic Association—from calling the shots in big-league ball, is handling "situations," opinionated managers and hotly disputed calls or plays that fall within the grayest areas of the rule book.

"The more different situations you can handle, the better," Clabough said. "By the time you reach Triple A, everybody can call a ball or strike. But the people that can handle situations are the ones that'll make it to the majors."

Royal Stadium

Trip to Royal Stadium worthwhile

By Pat Matreoli
Staff affiliate

The heat certainly is off regarding a late-season pennant chase by the Cardinals.

And fans may be getting tired of seeing the Mets, Phillies and the like come through town and take advantage of the sinking Redbirds.

But an alternative form of baseball entertainment is available for the true fan who only catches the American League games on the tube. And it is only a four-hour ride across the state.

A recent skid by the Kansas City Royals has diminished the chances for postseason play in Missouri come October. But the Royals, who are in fourth place in the A.L. Western Division, will host several of the teams at the top of the standings in coming weeks.

Tickets are not nearly as hot an item as is George Brett of late, and this affords fans ample opportunity to enjoy baseball at Royals Stadium, located in the Harry S. Truman Sports Complex in suburban Kansas City, just south of I-70.

Bob Wood, who rates all 26 Major League ballparks in his book "Dodger Dogs to Fenway Franks," describes Royals Stadium as a "masterpiece in plastic." Wood ranks the park along with Dodger Stadium as the two best parks in the major leagues.

The stadium, which has a seating capacity of 40,625, has unique characteristics.

There are no outfield bleacher seats. Rather, a 12-story-high scoreboard rises above a grassy knoll in center field.

Cross Country challenge set

The SIUE Cougar Cross Country Challenge will be held this year over two weekends beginning with 2K and 3K runs this Saturday on the SIUE course east of campus.

The 2K run will begin at 8 a.m. and the 3K event will start at 8:30 a.m. On Saturday, Aug. 20, a 3K event will begin at 8 a.m. and a 5K race will start at 8:30 a.m.

Men and women will compete in separate divisions. There are five age groups in each division: 18 and under, 19-29, 30-39, 40-49, and 50 and over.

Race day entries will be accepted each day beginning at 7 a.m. The entry fee is $6 per race or $10 for both races.

The first 80 runners to sign up for both races will receive a free T-shirt. The top three finishers in each division and age group will receive Converse athletic bags.

The races, sponsored by Converse and Anderson Hospital, are fund-raisers for the SIUE cross country program, coach Harry Lang said.

For more information call 692-2877.

Ducks Unlimited banquet Aug. 27

The Granite City Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will hold its annual fund raising banquet on Aug. 27 at St. Gregory Hall, 10 Colonial Drive, Granite City.

Registration is at 6 p.m.; dinner at 7 p.m. and a wildlife art auction at 8 p.m. For ticket information call 677-2458 or 876-8526. All donations are tax deductible.

Soccer meeting Aug. 16 at GCHS

There will be an Illinois High School Association soccer meeting in the Granite City High School annex on Aug. 16.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. Haig Nighobossian of Granite City, an IHSA referee, will run the meeting.
